GERMANS HURL ANOTHER FURIOUS ATTACK IN ARGONNE

MARCH OUT AS FIRE MENACES

Pupils Escape in Safety from Burning Scarlet School House.

TEACHER WAS CALM; PANIC IS AVERTED

"Get on your wraps and take your books out; school will be dismissed for today and don't loiter," said Miss Alma Kariger, teacher in school No. 5, in Washington township, commonly known as the Scarlet school, located on the Goshen road, at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning, and when the twenty-eight pupils got outside they found the structure in flames and in half an hour it had been gutted by fire.

James Young, a director in the school district, discovered the blaze while he was working about his home a short distance away, and ran to the building. The teacher knew nothing of it until Mr. Young quietly called her to the door and imparted the information.

She did not become excited and succeeded in marching the children out without accident. They have no fire drill in the school and, while there probably would have been little danger, as there is but one room and the building was only a story high, the teacher and the director displayed great presence of mind in taking no chances.

Nothing to Fight Flames With.

A big crowd responded to the alarm, but there was no effective means of fighting the fire, although the teacher's desk, the piano and some pictures were gotten out. One pupil lost his books in the blaze. Water carried from a nearby farm house in pails failed to conquer the blaze.

The four walls were left standing and seemed in fair condition, but when the school is rebuilt it will be made modern and probably these walls will be razed. In the meantime the school will be conducted in the church, half a mile west.

No attempt was made to get the fire department from Fort Wayne, as there was not water enough available to have done any good and the fire burned too rapidly to have been extinguished by the auto chemical.

First Thought of Pupils.

Mr. Young did not give an alarm. His first thought was of the pupils. The blaze started at the base of the chimney on the north end of the school and was eating its way slowly down toward the leaves when it was first seen.

The building was erected in 1876 and is one of the oldest schools in the county, having been in service for thirty-

Receiver's Certificates to Carry Fordward Rumely Concern.

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—To continue the operation of the M. Rumely company, the $30,000,000 agricultural machinery manufacturing concern for which Finley P. Mount, of this city, was appointed receiver on January 19, the receiver's certificates to the total of $1,500,000 were authorized in the United States district court here today. Mr. Mount was authorized to offer $550,000 worth of the certificates for immediate sale.

The plan to continue the plant which has branch offices in all sections of the country, was reached at conferences between Mr. Mount and the creditors, held in New York last week.

Counsel for the creditors here today in connection with the order for the receiver's certificates says the plans of Mr. Mount had the approval of the creditors and that the outlook was bright for the concern.

ASKS $500,000 FOR CHICAGO UNEMPLOYED

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Solicitation of the $500,000 fund to provide work for Chicago's unemployedbegan today under direction of Prof. Charles Henderson, of the University of Chicago, chairman of the municipal industrial commission. The fund is being raised as the result of an appeal made by Mayor Harrison to citizens on Saturday. It is the object of the commission to insist upon a year's residence in Chicago as a qualification for work.

The work created by the fund will be used to beautify the city. Cleaning unsightly spots and street work of all kinds, for which public funds do not provide, will be started immediately according to the plans.

STEAMER DACIA IS NOW READY TO SAIL

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8.—The steamer Dacia was all ready today to start on her long heralded voyage to Rotterdam with cotton from Galveston for Bremen. Captain McDonald took out his clearance papers early today and said he would sail before night on the usual steamer lanes. Five members of the crew left the ship.

Great Britain has given notice she will seize the ship and pay for the cargo. The state department and the London foreign office have had exchanges on the case, which probably will be tried out in a prize court. One British cruiser has been in this vicinity for some time.

CROOKED WORK SAYS SENATOR

Minority Leader Robinson Makes Charge on Floor of the Senate.

NOT CONSIDERED BY COMMITTEE, HE SAYS

Auburn Man Refutes Allegation of Legislative Juggling.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 8.—Charges of crooked work in reporting bills out of committee were made on the floor of the senate this morning by Minority Leader Robinson. The charges were made following the calling up of Senator Elsener's bill on second reading, which provides that a prosecutor may take a change of venue to another county in a criminal court case.

Robinson termed the bill "vicious" and moved that it should be recommitted to committee for further consideration. He declared that the bill had been reported for passage to the senate when it had never been considered by the judiciary committee, to which it was referred. He said he was the third member of the committee to arrive at the meeting last week when the bill was supposed to have been considered, Senator Clarke, chairman, and Elsener being the only members there at the time. There are eleven members of the committee.

"If the bill was considered," shouted Senator Robinson, "it was considered by

Cashier Who Ended Life Left Note Putting Blame on Business Men.

Lebanon, Pa., Feb. 8.—A notice posted today on the doors of the First National bank of Schaefferstown, near here, announced that the institution would remain closed until after the funeral on Wednesday of Alvin Binner, the cashier who committed suicide on Saturday.

Binner left a note addressed to his wife in which he said he was "wrong in my bank accounts." The note also stated that he did not have a cent of the bank's money, but was caught by certain business men of the town.

A bank examiner has found some irregularities and it is understood these consist of overdrafts to the men mentioned by Binner in his note to his wife.

The amount of money involved is said to be more than $12,000. The directors of the bank have promised to make good. The deposits amount to about $100,000.

NEWARK TO BE GIVEN KANSAS CITY'S PLACE

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Newark probably will be given Kansas City's place in the Federal league, it was said here following the return of President Gilmore from the east today. Gilmore declined to state whether the team would be placed in New York or in the New Jersey city, but from another source came the information, according to the newspapers, that Newark is the one. Gilmore declared he already had made all arrangements for the transfer. He said that a "prominent oil man" would furnish part of the capital necessary to start the club in its new eastern location.

No other changes in the circuit will be made this year, but plans have been made to enter New York next year, according to the president. The population from which a Newark team could draw is estimated at 1,500,000, the Federal leaguers say.

ALLIES ARE DRIVEN OUT

Today's War News Given in Summary.

The German army in the Argonne has begun another of the repeated attacks which have made that section of eastern France one of the most bitterly contested battlefields of Europe. The official German statement of today announces the capture of a portion of the allies' positions in the Argonne. The French war office says that one German attack was repulsed and that the fighting is still in progress.

In northern France, near La Bassee, there was a violent artillery engagement yesterday, but along the western front as a whole it was comparatively quiet.

Slackening of the attack along the Warsaw front by the Germans and their transfer of troops to East Prussia are expected in Warsaw to lead to a general onslaught by the Russians in the endeavor to clear Poland of the invaders. A forward movement already has been undertaken in other sections of the line near the Bzura river and is reported to have won some successes for the Russians.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—The war department this afternoon gave out an official statement which read:

"The fighting for our positions south of the canal and southwest of La Bassee continues. Part of the short trench taken by the enemy has been recaptured.

"In the Argonne we wrested from our opponents a portion of their fortified positions; otherwise there has been no change of importance in this region. On the East Prussian frontier, southeast of the plain of the lakes and in Poland, on the right bank of the Vistula there have been a few unimportant and for us successful engagements of local importance. Otherwise there is nothing to report from the east."

Delegations—Odd Fellows, Third Presbyterian church Bible classes, Grace Reformed church Progrida girls, Woodmen circle, Ben Hur lodge, boys' class of the First Evangelical Sunday school.

Seven hundred and nine decisions was the record made Sunday, the biggest day of the Fort Wayne evangelistic campaign and the greatest day in the history of Dr. Lyon's career as an evangelist.

Scores of penitents filtered out from the big crowd at each service, men in all walks of life, women, young and old, marched bravely forward to start life anew. Though exhausted from one of the most strenuous days he has ever experienced, when Dr. Lyon left the tabernacle Sunday night there was a broad smile on his face and he was truly happy. He had made a new record and Fort Wayne had seen a sight never before witnessed in the religious life of the city.

The biggest demonstration came in the morning at the union Sunday school service, when 427 responded to the invitation. At the regular morning service there were twenty-nine decisions. In the afternoon meeting for men there were seventy-one decisions and at the women's meeting fifty-five. In the evening 127 took the stand for Christ.

On Saturday night—it might well have been called railroad night—seventy-nine penitents traveled down the sawdust aisles on the way to Christianity's terminal. Dr. Lyon opened wide the throttle of his piquant speech and choochooed with the gospel message straight into the hearts of the multitude, which filled the wooden shed to the doors.

Patrolman and Jones Sing.

Patrolman F. A. Wilmoth, who responded to the invitation Sunday morning, and Choir Director Loren G. Jones made the big hit Sunday evening. The officer in his blue uniform and Jones in a uniform he had borrowed from one of the other patrolmen on duty at the tabernacle, marched to the platform, amid the greatest applause that has been heard during the meetings, and sang a duet. When they started to leave there was another tremendous outburst of applause and they had to sing again. Both men were given the Chautauqua salute, the demonstration continuing for several minutes.

"I see that Jones is trying to get a job on the police force," Dr. Lyon said after the applause had subsided. "I think if I lose him I'll take Wilmoth."

Dr. Lyon delivered a convincing sermon Sunday evening on "Not Far From the Kingdom." As he explained, the message was for those living fairly, honest, upright lives and yet are away from Christ.

"The kingdom of God was the central truth in the teaching of Christ," the evangelist declared. "He did not talk much about salvation, but rather about the causes that produced salvation, the results that come from citizenship in the kingdom of God."

Saved By Regeneration.

SOME FLASHES FROM DR. LYON'S SERMONS

When the end comes go with the realization that all is well with your soul.

Real riches are not on the outside, but on the inside.

Jesus Christ did not talk very much about salvation, but rather about the causes that produced salvation.

Nearness to the kingdom of God without entering into the kingdom is a position absolutely untenable.

You are not saved by generation, but by regeneration.

If the gospel of Jesus Christ is true it is worth every pound of flesh you have.

If it's right to live in a Christian community it is right to be a Christian.

Better that you and I were dead and in our graves than living rejecting Jesus Christ.

British Government Says It Did Not Order Use of Neutral Flag.

London, Feb. 8.—Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador in London today forwarded to the state department at Washington report on Lusitania incident. The ambassador formally reviews the use of the American flag on entering Liverpool Saturday morning, as was related to the members of the embassy staff by Americans who had crossed the Atlantic on the vessel.

Mr. Page has not communicated with the foreign office concerning the incident and as yet there is no official communication regarding the British vessel using the American flag.

As the Lusitania carried 340 cabin passengers, many of them prominent Americans who have wide acquaintance in London, the news of the flag incident spread rapidly in the hotels and clubs until it has become almost the sole topic of conversation.

The British government stoutly maintains the captain of the Lusitania was not ordered by government officials to use a neutral flag.

(Special Correspondence.)

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 8.—A duel of wits and heated words between noted Southern California beauties featued the recent suit of Mrs. Madge Kingsbury for separate maintenance from her husband, a prominent hotel man here.

Mrs. Kingsbury accused her husband of worshipping feminine pulchritude not wisely but too well, naming Miss Marguerite Gibson, winner of an Ocean park beauty contest, as the "other woman."

Miss Gibson is as brunette as her accuser is fair, and the two offered a striking contrast during their charges and refutations concerning the favor of Kingsbury. Both are noted for their display of gowns at beach promenades.

"When I spoke to him about the other woman he struck me," testified the wife. Miss Gibson declared that she had not known Kingsbury was married, and that their relations had been merely friendly.

LEGISLATURE MUST SPEED UP RAPIDLY

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—The last half of the sixty-ninth biennial session of the general assembly began today when both houses reconvened at 10 o'clock after having recessed over Sunday. The month that remains will be a busy one for the lawmakers as the only piece of legislation of any consequence enacted during the first period is the anti-lobby law.

The administration is pledged to the enactment of a workmen's compensation law, a direct primary measure and a reform of the tax laws, which measures, it is thought, will be pushed along and some definite action taken before the close of the present week. Registration reforms contemplated in as many as a half dozen bills now pending, the specific and the regular appropriation bills and a law making shorter hours of work for women are other important pieces of legislation that will engross the attention of the law-making body for the month that remains. Leaders of both branches declare that all the foregoing measures will be disposed of before the closing days of the session. Thus far efforts have been made to clear the calendar of many of the lesser important bills in order that the administration measures could be taken up separately and without interruption.

While there have been a number of bills introduced seeking to change the road laws, it is said that likely an agreeable measure will be decided on at this session. None of the bills presented has found its way out of committee and the flood of proposed measures on this question which presented themselves early in the session seems to have subsided.

The city manager and the commission form of government for cities in the state will be discussed in the senate chamber, while a public hearing will be held on the bill of Senator George C. Wood. The bill provides for voters of a city being given the right to choose either form of government at an election. Delegations from a number of cities are expected to attend.

Both house and senate democrats probably will hold one or more caucuses this week. The senate will take up the Stutsenburg proposed amendments to the constitution, while the house has the registration measure as a subject for the caucus. Workmen's compensation likely will be made a caucus question later.

WANTED TO IMPROVE LUCK OF CONSTABLE

Hammond, Ind., Feb. 8.—"Con sarn it," said Constable Frank Hatton, of Roselawn, Ind., as Clyde "Battle Ax" Gibbons took the fifth straight game of rhum. "Who dealt that mess?"

"Maybe you can have some luck with me out," remarked Gibbons, the constable's prisoner, arising from the game. "I'll go upstairs and get ready to leave in the morning."

He didn't wait till morning. Instead he stamped about upstairs for a time and then secretly left with Mrs. Ida Peterson, it is said. They disappeared into the night through a window, via a ladder. And now the constable is under a withering fire of criticism.

Mrs. Peterson, who is the wife of a railroad man, and Gibbons were arrested Friday for alleged misconduct. The women of Roselawn obtained the warrants. Being unable to give bond, the couple was placed in charge of Constable Hatton, who, while waiting for the morning milk train to take them to the county seat, took them to Mrs. Peterson's home for the night.

Knowing the official's weakness for cards, the male prisoner suggested a game. Two other men were called from the county store to "sit in." It was midnight when Gibbons worked his ruse. The constable, in his efforts to recapture the pair, awakened the town. He got George Haskall, an old soldier, out of bed and accused him of harboring the pair. Haskall threatened to shoot each member of the posse with an old army musket. The [illegible] system is [illegible] in Roselawn now.

"While virtue is better than vice, yet for one to live a fairly upright and honest life and yet reject Jesus Christ makes that man's influence more detrimental and injurious than the influence of the man who is openly vicious and wicked," he said. Then he went on to explain, declaring that the cause of Christ was never hurt by antagonism, but always by indifference.

"Why, a man had the impudence the other night to tell me there are no bawdy houses here. Supposing the people here would wake up—I say just supposing they would—and try to get these places out of the city and the moral man would stand back neutral. He would be the greatest injury possible. Better you and I be dead and in our graves than living rejecting Jesus Christ."

Suddenly the evangelist stopped as a woman was taking out her crying baby. He did not say a word—it wasn't necessary, for everybody was thinking of the nursery provided for babies at the Westminster church.

Chance of a Generation.

"Oh, Fort Wayne, you have the chance of the generation," the speaker continued. "If this city is not saved during this campaign it will not be won to Christ in this generation. If Terre Haute or Cincinnati—and I can't conceive of anything worse than Cincinnati—had had your chance they would probably have taken it long ago."

The evangelist told the story of a man freezing to death in a snow storm just as he had reached his own yard, to show that the moral man is going to be lost because he is outside, and yet so near the kingdom.

"God forbid that you who are so near the kingdom that on the judgment book it will be written: 'So near home and yet lost, eternally lost.'"

As the people were coming forward the applause was not as enthusiastic as Dr. Lyon thought it should be.

"Why don't you cheer them," the evangelist shouted. "Why do you stand there like sticks? Do something."

Big Men's Meeting.

The best men's meeting, although not as largely attended perhaps as the first two, was held Sunday afternoon at the tabernacle, when seventy-one men marched bravely forward, taking the evangelist by the hand determined to lead better lives in the future. Gray-haired men together with young men took the stand for Christ. It was a wonderful demonstration.

Dr. Lyon spoke on the subject of "Profit and Loss," a sermon directed particularly to the business man. He declared that Jesus Christ was a business man.

"The trouble about wealth it is often too expensive," he continued. "Let that soak in." While the statement was "soaking in" the evangelist stood and looked at his audience. "The real riches are not on the outside, but on the inside," he continued.

During the course of his sermon Dr. Lyon took occasion to express his disapproval of the term used by certain Fort Wayne newspapers in referring to him as the little evangelist.

"You can't judge a man by the beef he has," he exclaimed. He said some people's idea of great men is such men as Jack Johnson. The evangelist characterized the statement that a business man could not be a Christian as a lie.

Dr. Lyon told of the death of men who, though possessed with wealth and everything that money could buy, men who had education and talent, but could find no peace on earth or even in death. He told of several such men who in their despondency had committed suicide. These men had not accepted Christ or their lives would have been different.

"When the end comes go with the realization that all is well with your soul," he pleaded.

At the conclusion of his sermon Dr. Lyon asked every man who believed that he had told the truth to stand to their feet. Nearly every man in the big audience stood.

Whisky Salesman Converted.

In his opening statements Dr. Lyon told of a conversation with a wholesale whisky salesman. He said that the salesman had told him that as a rule when he came to Fort Wayne he sold on an average of one hundred barrels. This time he said he hasn't sold ten barrels.

"I have been an unbeliever," the salesman told him, "but after that demonstration Saturday evening when all of those railroad men marched to the tabernacle, many of them going forward after the invitation had been given, I went back to my hotel and wrote to the house that I intended to quit my job on the first day of March." Dr. Lyon had scarcely finished telling of the conversation than there was an outburst of applause that fairly made the rafters ring.

"That's what you railroad men did Saturday night," the evangelist shouted after the applause had subsided.

Indiana Going Dry.

The evangelist told of a saloonkeeper attending the meeting Saturday night. He saw the railroad men march to the tabernacle and the big demonstration as they entered the building. After the meeting the saloonkeeper was heard to say: "This looks to me as though Fort Wayne and Indiana is going dry."

One of the features of the song service was a duet by Clinton Willson and Mr. Jones. Mr. Wilson was highly complimented by Mr. Jones for the interest he had taken in organizing the chorus before the meetings began. The male quartet also sang a selection and made a big hit. Prayer was offered by Rev. E. Q. Laudeman.

Women's Meetings.

The last of the meetings for women were held Sunday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church and Simpson M. E. church. Mrs. Barr talked at the First Presbyterian church and during her preliminary remarks took occasion to thank the young women ushers for their services, the singers for the time and talent contributed and the women of Fort Wayne who have so generously opened the doors of their homes to the neighborhood prayer meetings. A testimony meeting was in order for six minutes and the women lost no time in responding, expressing thanks to God for His goodness to their families and friends.

During her sermon Mrs. Barr laid particular stress on the call of the voice of God. He has been calling to humanity since the days when He communed daily with the forefathers in the garden of Eden until by wilful disobedience of His commaands they were banished. He spoke to Noah and asked him to build the ark for the safety of the races, to Moses and to David and so on and He is still speaking today to the hearts of men, women and children. She said: "God has spoken to us through Jesus who lived among us, ministered to us and suffered for us. We hear the voice of ambition, wealth and society and are wearing ourselves threadbare for the material things and steadily turn a deaf ear to spiritual things."

The Social Evil.

Touching on the social evil and the haunts of vice which are allowed to flourish in cities, the speaker said she prayed to God to hasten the day when the legislators at Indianapolis would quit spending their time on lengthening the length of fishhooks and get some laws into effect which would crush out the heinous resorts that are instrumental in hurling young manhood and womanhood into destruction.

In closing Mrs. Barr urged her hearers not to turn a deaf ear to the voice of God lest they hear too late. No asset in the whole realm of life can recompense for the love of the Lord Jesus Christ. Miss [illegible] sang a solo and Mrs. E. A. Donnan led in prayer. There were fifty decisions.

At Simpson M. E. Church.

Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Lyon conducted the meeting for women at the Simpson M. E. church, which was well filled. Mrs. Jones conducted a brief song service during which she asked for testimonies of definite blessings received during these revival services. The response was immediate and enthusiastic. Miss Ethel Doud assisted in the song service and sang as a solo, "No Room in the Inn," also a consecration song during the after meeting.

Mrs. Lyon delivered the address, declaring very emphatically that she is not a preacher or public speaker, but every woman present felt the power of her consecrated Christian life and sympathetic heart throughout the helpful searching message. She spoke first of how Christ was being kept out of the nation, giving as one instance of this nation's failure to adopt prohibition for which broken-hearted women all over this country are pleading. She declared that Christ as Lord and Master is being kept out of many churches and homes.

Mrs. Lyon closed the service with a consecration prayer service for the Christian women present.

Union Sunday School Meeting.

The union Sunday school Sunday morning filled every seat in the tabernacle. The seating of the schools was arranged by the superintendent of the tabernacle, G. R. Sutton. The schools from the smaller churches were seated in the front. A bouquet of roses was sent by the W. C. T. U. and had a prominent place on the speaker's platform. Dr. Lyon made the announcements of the morning. He spoke of the fact that the last two weeks of the campaign were beginning and he asked that the parents of the high school pupils whom he said had been reported to him as refusing to allow their young people to attend the tabernacle meetings on account of their studies permit the boys and girls to come even though they might miss some of their work. Dr. Lyon commended the action of the acting principal of the high school in the stand which he had taken in the matter of dancing. Tuesday noon there will be a prayer meeting held at the high school for the high school girls. Dr. Lyon announced that next Tuesday would be another workers' day similar to that of last Tuesday when the work of canvassing the city calling at every home and inviting the people and praying in the homes would be completed.

The group prayer meetings which were to be held in the various churches that morning will be adjourned, and instead the prayer meetings will be held in the homes from 9:30 to 10 o'clock. After the adjournment of these meetings the workers will go out two by two to complete the canvass already begun.

Reads a Report.

Without using the name or giving the number of the section Dr. Lyon read a report which he said was typical of the work which was done all over the city last Tuesday. The report stated that the captain and five assistants had visited 99 homes, had been rejected by only five, and had been royally treated in many Catholic homes in which they had called. At one door where a call was made the workers were told that they could come in "if they wouldn't knock the saloons." Dr. Lyon commended the action of a certain Catholic priest in commending the tabernacle meeting to his church. There were 427 decisions at the Sunday school meeting and 29 decisions at the regular morning service.

Meetings in Churches.

The following churches will hold meetings Monday night at their respective churches as same were reported to E. H. Clifford, acting press and publicity chairman: Grace Reformed, First Evangelical, Simpson M. E., West Jefferson Church of Christ, First M. E., Rescue Mission, East Creighton Avenue Church of Christ, Calvary U. B., St. Paul's M. E., Westminster Presbyterian, Bethany Presbyterian, Church of God, South Side Baptist, West Creighton Avenue Church of Christ.

Saturday Evening.

More than 600 railroad men attended the meeting Saturday evening, marching to the tabernacle in a body headed by the Elks band. As the delegation entered the big building the band played "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and there was loud cheering and applauding.

Preliminary to his sermon Dr. Lyon said he did not want to be misunderstood on the state prohibition bill now pending in the legislature. He declared that if every minister in the state would do his full duty in advocating the driving out of the booze business the bill would pass and be incorporated in the laws of Indiana. He made that same statement on Friday evening, but had been misquoted by "a reporter who has not been covering the meetings regularly."

Dr. Lyon spoke on "The Leprosy of Sin," comparing the leprosy of sin with that of physical leprosy. During the course of his sermon he declared that he had been half inclined to bring a stack of letters he had received and read them. The letters were from heart-broken wives and mothers, he declared. One letter from a mother, he said, told how her daughter had been going to a wine-room, where the proprietor locks the door and leaves the girls to the prey of vicious men.

"God help those girls, but God damn that business—that is not blasphemy, it is as sacred a thing as I have said from this platform," he exclaimed. There was a total of seventy-nine decisions Saturday.

Features of the song service were two solos by Barney Krull, who sang "The Rosary" and "The Mighty Deed," and a selection by a quartet composed of shopmen.

The quartet was composed of James A. Foster, Valentine Ewig, Harry Emmerson and Charles B. Waterson, all Pennsylvania shopmen, and the singing was one of the big hits of the meeting.

Meetings at Larwill.

The Weaver evangelistic party has closed its meetings at Larwill. In spite of the inclemency of the weather on the last day a large crowd gathered to enjoy the last of what was a very spirited and spiritual series of meetings. The little town was stirred as it has not been in years. Almost a hundred came out for Christ. Although many thought the town too small for the Weaver party the evangelist easily raised the expenses incurred and on the last day a handsome thank offering was raised for Mr. Weaver.

Revival Notes.

Thursday will be mothers' day at the tabernacle. Every person is requested to wear a red carnation if mother is living and a white carnation if mother is dead.

Luncheons for the business girls were so popular that Mrs. Barr has been urged to continue them. The Y. W. C. A. has invited the business girls to lunch there Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 11 to 1:15 o'clock. The dining-room will be open to them.

PEACE MEETING HAS VERY WARLIKE TONE

Chicago, Feb. 8.—J. J. O'Leary, of New York, president of the American Truth society, yesterday denounced England, criticized America and pleaded for Germany at a mass meeting of the American Neutrality league, of which the avowed purpose was the promotion of peace.

His mention of William Jennings Bryan brought forth hisses, and Jenkin Lloyd Jones, pastor of All Souls church, arose and declared he would leave the platform unless neutrality were preserved. The meeting was one of the largest ever held in the city, a great percentage of the audience being Germans.

"I believe it was right in this hall that William Jennings Bryan, our gifted secretary of state, proclaimed that the republican party was trying to crucify the people of this country upon a cross of gold," Mr. O'Leary said. "He now is trying to crucify the fatherlands of more than 25,000,000 of our people upon a cross of British gold."

Chairman Jones introduced Frank Buchanan, a labor leader, scheduled as "a neutral speaker," with the proviso that "he may present himself to you if he chooses to take his life in his hands."

Mr. Buchanan was met with hoots and cat calls when he defended the sincerity of purpose of Mr. Bryan.

"While I may not agree with the secretary of state," he said, "I do believe in his sincerity in his work for peace and I believe he will be able to do some work that will be valuable. You are not going to make progress by appealing to prejudice."

Mr. Jones, who had been asked to act as chairman, arrived half an hour late. When he reached the coliseum he found the sidewalk lined by men selling banners bearing pictures of the German emperor and the German eagle.

O'Leary was talking, roundly applauded by the audience, when Jones entered the hall. German banners were hanging from the galleries. American flags were outnumbered.

Jones pleaded for a place for the allies' flags. "Where is the rose of England?" he demanded. "Why is the French flag not there? Where is the Russian flag?"

"Put them all there, I say. If this is a pro-German and an anti-British meeting—and mind you, my attitude would be the same if it were pro-British and anti-German—I have no place here and respectfully beg leave to withdraw."

Before the arrival of Chairman Jones, the meeting adopted the declaration of the principles of neutrality adopted at Washington at a conference of various organizations as well as formal resolutions advocating the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition and munitions of war, calling for the national control of the manufacture of weapons for peace and harmony in the promotion of neutrality without arousing antagonisms. The resolutions deprecated the use of airships as a means of dropping bombs or other missiles of destruction on unfortified and [illegible] [illegible].

If It is Right To Live Near the Kingdom of God It Is Right To Live in That Kingdom, Says Dr. Lyon

NOT FAR FROM THE KINGDOM.

It is interesting to note how the Lord Jesus always put the very best possible construction on every human motive. Christ was in the shadow of the cross. For days His enemies had been dogging His foot-steps, trying to entrap Him in His speech. They had been plying Him with numerous questions and at last one steps out from the ranks of His opponents, whose manner seemed different from the rest, evidently bearing the stamp of sincerity. This scribe put this question to our Lord: "Which is the greatest commandment of all?" Jesus, quoting from the book of Deuteronomy, replied, "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength, this is the first commandment." And the second like, namely this: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The scribe seemed to enter with enthusiasm into this reply and responded: "Well, Master, thou hast said the truth; for there is one God and there is none other but He. And to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices."

Now, Jesus might reasonably have classed this man with His opponents, but, detecting what He believed was a mark of sincerity in the man, and especially noting the aptness of his reply, our Lord exclaimed, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The kingdom of God was the central truth in the teaching of Christ. He did not talk much about salvation, but rather about the causes that produced salvation, the results that come from citizenship in the kingdom of God. Jesus only rarely used the word, "heaven," but on every page of His ministry He spoke of the kingdom of heaven or the kingdom of God. When in reality and in truth you accept the King of that kingdom, Jesus Christ, as your personal Lord and Master, you become a citizen of that kingdom. There is no salvation outside of the kingdom of God. The citizens of the kingdom are heirs of God. Upon them is bestowed eternal inheritance, protection, salvation, development and joy.

That one is not far from the kingdom of God, first of all who understands clearly the requirements for entrance. If it were not so serious, it would really be ridiculous what foolish ideas some people have about salvation. You ask one man, "Are you a Christian?" He replies, "Surely I am a Christian. I had good Christian parents." He seems to think that he gained religion by heredity, as he would the color of his hair or eyes, or cast of countenance. What your parents are or were not does not affect your standing at the bar of God. Every one must give an account of himself. You ask another one, "Are you a Christian?" He replies, "Certainly, I am a Christian; I have a good, Christian wife." Some men keep their religion like their property, all in their wife's name.

That man is not far from the kingdom of God who understands that in order to be saved he must forsake his sins, and, to the extent of his ability make restitution for sin. He must surrender his life to do the will of God in everything, and receive Jesus as his personal Savior and Lord. In the next place that one is not far from the kingdom, who realizes and acknowledges that he is a sinner. It is almost amusing to hear some folks tell how good they are. You wonder that their wings have not sprouted long ago. Whenever a man begins to boast of his goodness, you can put it down that he is trying to conceal his wickedness. If you think you are all right, it is very certain that you are about all wrong. The nearer you approach Christ and the more of His grace and love you have in your heart, the more you will be conscious of your own short-comings and unworthiness. The better you are, the more ready will you, in humility, confess your sinfulness.

In the next place, that one is not far from the kingdom of God, who has a real love for the things that are good and true and Godly. I have often been greatly gratified at the close of a service when many have come forward expressing their purpose to begin a Christian life, by asking, "All of you who are glad to see so many coming out for God, will you lift your hands?" And many who are not yet Christians themselves often have been among the first to signify their pleasure in seeing others taking this step. Will you just now apply this test to your own life? When you have seen so many men and women walking down these aisles night after night and declaring their purpose to begin the Christian life, have you been gratified by the sight, or, on the other hand, has there been a secret annoyance and displeasure? In your heart of hearts have you said to yourself, "I wish there would not be so many coming out for Christ." Have you been pleased or displeased by these great victories for the Lord? Moreover, do you enjoy the fellowship of God's people? Do you take delight in hearing the word of God preached and the gospel sung? Is there in your own heart a real love for the things that are true and pure and good, or, on the other hand, do you take more enjoyment in the evil and the impure and the ungodly? Answer these questions for yourself. I believe there are many here tonight that although you cannot say as yet that you are Christians, you do not have the consciousness that you are saved, and yet you take sincere pleasure in seeing the cause of Christ built up. You enjoy the fellowship of Christian people and enjoy hearing the gospel preached or sung. If you come under this class, to you Christ is saying, as He said to that scribe centuries ago, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

Now we are led to face a solemn truth. Nearness to the kingdom of God is not sufficient. A man may be within a block of the station when the train pulls out, or of the wharf when the ship weighs anchor and puts out to sea, and he will get left just as much as if he were a hundred miles away. Supposing a man were a candidate for office, and at the election got within one vote of the successful nominee; he would be defeated just as much as if he got no votes at all. Supposing a man were out west to one of the United States land offices, when the drawing was to take place for government lands. When he returns home you ask him, "Did you get a piece of land? Were you successful in the drawing?" "Almost," he says, "the fortunate number was 5,898 and my number was 5,897." You say to him, "Well, that did not do you any good. You might just as well have had no number at all." The fact that you are near to the kingdom of God, unless you have crossed the threshold and entered into the kingdom, leaves you outside the gate just as much as if you were far, far away.

In the next place, nearness to the kingdom of God is apt to produce in your mind a feeling of self-sufficiency. The very fact that you have lived a good life, that you are honest, upright and moral, that you have in your heart a love for the things that are good and true, and are conscious that it would not be very much of a step, or make very much of a change in your conduct if you did become a Christian, is in a sense that may be the source of your greatest peril. You think that you are so near to becoming a Christian, that you are not far from the kingdom, and this may cause you to remain content where you are, and thus you may be in greater danger of being lost than the man who is far, far away from the Kingdom, who realizes his lost condition and is anxious to be saved.

When Hannibal, the great general of Carthage, recruited his army for the conquest of Rome and marched across northern Africa, across the Mediterranean near Gibraltar, the pillar of Hercules, he went up through Spain and southern France, and at last, after months of terrible hardship and toil and suffering, his army crossed the Alps mountains, and they came down on the rich, fertile, sun-kissed plains of northern Italy. Hannibal knew that his army was stronger than the army of the Romans, and feeling sure that at any time he could march south and conquer the enemy, said to himself, "There is no need of haste." And so, with his army he settled down in winter quarters at Capua, and there his soldiers became effeminate and weak through ease and luxury and lost their strength and vigor. The result was that when at last they did march south and gave battle to the Romans, they were disastrously defeated. Their nearness to victory was the cause of their destruction. May it not be the same way with you? You, who have a real love for the things that are honest and good and of good report; you who have rejoiced to see others coming out for Christ; you who have been very near to decision yourself, these very qualities which are commendable may prove the cause of your eternal doom.

Nearness to the kingdom of God, without entering into that kingdom, is a position absolutely untenable, a course totally inconsistent. If it is right to live near the kingdom of God, it is right to live in that kingdom. The Christian life admits of no neutrality. If Jesus Christ is what He claims to be, if He has the power on earth to forgive sin and grant everlasting life, it is the greatest, mightiest fact of this universe. If Christ is not all that He claims, if He has not the power to forgive sin and impart eternal life to mankind, He is the greatest imposter the world ever knew and is unworthy even of our respect. Between these two positions there is no neutrality.

A man says, "Well, I am not a Christian myself, but I give my money to support the church and Christian enterprise." "Why do you do that?" "Oh," he replies, "because the church is the best thing we have on earth, and Christianity is true and right." "Well, if that is so you ought not merely to give your means to the cause of Christ, but you ought to give yourself." In other words, you ought to do more or do less. If the gospel of Christ is false, you ought to oppose it. But if it is what you admit it to be, the great power on earth for the uplift of mankind, there is only one course worthy of you, as a reasonable, consistent man, and that is to stand forth earnestly and loyally declaring your allegiance to Christ and to the Christian life. It would be as if a foreigner would come to this country to make his home, and enjoy all the benefits of America, and yet refuse to pay taxes or to enter into citizenship. If our country is the right place to live in, it is the country to which we ought to declare our allegiance and defend its institutions.

In like manner this living in nearness to the kingdom of God, and yet refusing to take upon yourself the responsibilities of its citizenship, makes your influence upon others especially detrimental. I am going to make a statement which may startle some of you, and at the outset you may say you do not believe, but I feel absolutely sure of my ground. The statement is this: That while virtue is always better than vice, and purity than impurity, yet for one to live a fairly upright and moral life, without becoming a Christian, makes the influence of that one from the spiritual standpoint especially disastrous and detrimental. In other words, for you to be a moral man and reject Christ does more to keep others away from salvation than does the immoral and the vicious man. I hear some one say, "I do not believe that. You will have to prove it." All right, I can. Let me ask you who has the greatest influence upon you yourself. Is it the man that is openly vulgar and vicious and vile, the thief or the drunkard? "Why," you say, "no, the only influence that kind of a person has upon me is repulsion." Who is the man that has the greatest influence on you? You reply, "It is the man who is the most intelligent, the most honorable and upright." Now that is just the point I want to make. Just as the man who is the most upright and honorable has the greatest influence upon you, so if you are living that kind of a life of uprightness and honesty you have the greatest influence upon others, and if you reject Christ, neglect His salvation and refuse to come out and take your stand on the Lord's side, by that very act you are saying to others that they ought to take a similar course. Therefore, out of your own mouth I have proved the truth of this statement. It would be as if a great campaign for moral reform was in progress in a city, and a prominent man, with a reputation for good citizenship, remained inactive and indifferent. By that course he would do more to weaken the power and zeal of the promoters of civic righteousness than a score of people, notoriously wicked and vicious.

Moreover, nearness to the kingdom of God leaves the soul absolutely without excuse for not entering into the kingdom. The fact that you can say, "I am not bad, dishonest or impure and there would not be many things I would have to change in my life if I accepted Christ. It would only be a step for me to come out into the Christian life," leaves you with far less reason for remaining away from God than the man who is far, far away. Which of two young men would have the less excuse for not having a college education, one, the son of well-to-do parents, living in a college town, almost within the shadow of the college buildings; or another young man, the son of poor parents, living a hundred miles away from college? Why, you say, "The young man in good circumstances, who lived near the college and whose parents were able and willing to give the benefits of an education, has far less excuse for not taking a college course than the poor fellow, residing far away with others dependent upon him."

Against what city was it that Jesus hurled His most scathing maledictions? You answer, "It was against Capernaum." What was Capernaum? "It was the city where He had lived and performed many of His greatest miracles." Hear Him as He exclaimed, "Oh, Capernaum, Capernaum, thou, in thine opportunities, are exalted to heaven. I tell thee thou shalt be cast down to hell. If the mighty works that have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have repented long ago in sack-cloth and ashes." Supposing Jesus would come to this city at the close of these meetings, could you not hear Him exclaim, "You who have lived in this community, where the gospel has been proclaimed, where night after night the invitation has been extended, where many others have come out on the Lord's side, you, who in your privilege and position were exalted up to the very gates of heaven itself, and yet you refused to enter in those gates, you who rejected Jesus Christ and His mercy, I tell you, you shall be cast down to hell."

This nearness to the kingdom of God ought to awaken in your heart a spirit of urgency. You will not always be so near. If you do not enter in you are going to drift away. There is a tide in the affairs of man, which, taken at its flood, leads on to glory, but neglected the strands and shores of time will be strewn with the wrecks of hopes and possibilities. Success consists in taking advantage of opportunity. Let me illustrate this truth from every-day affairs. Some years ago I was holding meetings in a city in central California, and near the close of the campaign a prominent lawyer, a worker in the meetings, came to me and said, "Mr. Lyon, have you ever been to the Yosemite valley?" I said, "No, I never have, but I have always desired to do so." "Well," said he, "I have an offer to make to you. I have a good, strong team of horses, a covered wagon and a complete camping outfit. You can take some friends and go over to Yosemite and I will see that the outlay of the expense will be practically nothing." It did seem an excellent opportunity, but I had an invitation to hold a campaign the next year in a city somewhat nearer to Yosemite and I finally concluded to delay my visit to the park until I returned. But I did not go back to California the next year, nor the next, nor the next. Now, eight years have gone by and the prospects are I will never get that near to that great scenery again.

Some years ago I was talking with a friend one day about a proposed trip I was planning to Arizona, and I made the remark that on my return I intended to go around by the way of the Grand canyon. He said to me, "Now, let me give you a word of advice. I want you to profit by my mistake. On going to southern California a few years ago, I had planned to take in the Grand canyon on my return trip, but business called me north to Portland and Seattle, and I found it necessary to return by the northern route, so I missed that great opportunity. This is my advice, go to the Grand canyon on your way out to Arizona, and then you will be sure of it." I saw there was wisdom in his advice. I changed my route and went out on the Santa Fe and stopped at the Grand canyon for three days, and beheld the beauty of that scenery. That canyon is 200 miles long, fourteen miles wide and a mile deep, and colored with the beauty of flowers. I went from there down to Phoenix, Ariz., found a good boarding place, unpacked my suit case and settled down to have a much needed rest. But the next day I received a telegram from home, saying that the children were down with scarlet fever, and I immediately repacked my satchel and hastened home. If I had not gone to the Grand canyon on my way out, I never would have gotten there. The very fact that you are near to the kingdom of God ought to arouse in your heart the element of immediateness. Take advantage of your privilege, enter into that kingdom while you can. Soon it will be too late.

In the last place, the fact that you have been not far from the kingdom of heaven, if you neglect to enter in, will make your eternal doom that much the more sad and bitter. Throughout the ages memory will be awakened. You will remember the chance you had, how near you came to salvation, with how little effort you could have crossed the line and been saved. They told me up in South Dakota, that in the early settlement of that region a farmer started out from home on a bright, clear winter morning with his horses and sleigh, to make a trip across the country. The weather was ideal and he reached his destination and after a dinner and rest he started to return. When he got out upon the open prairie, suddenly the sky became overcast with heavy clouds and the wind began to blow and the snow began to fall, and it became intensely cold. There came on one of those Dakota blizzards, that no one has ever been able to graphically describe. Before long the track in the road was obliterated. The man became numb with the cold, the lines dropped from his hands, the horses then unguided, directing themselves by their homing instinct, started across the prairie. All that night the storm raged about the cabin. The wife and family of this man spent the hours in sleepless anxiety. When daylight dawned they shoveled the snow from the [illegible] to the eaves, and out in the door-yard, between the house and the barn, they found the faithful team and the sleigh, and in the bottom of the wagon box they found the frozen body of the husband and father. He had died in his own door-yard and was almost home.

There are those in this building, who night after night have heard the gospel of Christ, who have been convinced that the Christian life was the right life to live. You have rejoiced to see others coming out for God. You have enjoyed the preaching of the word and these gospel songs. Can it be that you will hesitate on the border of the Christian life, almost into the kingdom and yet be eternally lost.

When the English steamer, "The Royal Charter," some years ago sailed from Liverpool on a long sea voyage, it contained in its list of passengers and crew some relative or friend of almost every citizen in that city. When the time came that the steamer was expected in port, a large share of the people of that city thronged the pier at daybreak, watching for the first sight of the incoming steamer. As they were anxiously awaiting, the terrible news came that the ship had struck upon a rock at midnight and had gone down with all its passengers and sailors. Said Dr. William Taylor, a pastor of Liverpool, "The first mate of that ill fated steamer was a member of my own church." The sad duty fell to that pastor to break the news of the death of that husband and father to the members of his family. Hastening up to the home, he knocked at the door. The daughter opened the door, and the mother looking over her daughter's shoulder exclaimed, "Pastor, we are very glad to see you. Come right in, we are waiting breakfast. The Royal Charter is due into port now. Husband will be here soon. You stay and sit down with us, and our joy will be complete." Then said the pastor, "I took the two hands of that wife in mine, and looking into her face said, 'I will have to tell you that you will never see your husband again on this earth. The Royal Charter struck upon a rock at midnight and all on board have perished.'" Said Dr. Taylor, "To my dying day I will never forget the sad, heart-broken wail of that wife, as with blanched face and bloodless lips, wringing her hands she paced up and down the room screaming, 'Oh, husband, husband, so near home! so near home! and yet lost!'" God grant that it may not be said of you, upon the judgment books of eternity, that you were so near home and yet lost.

SEES WORLD'S PEACE IN WORLD-WIDE MAIL

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—A world postal service, with low, uniform rates, will be proposed at a meeting of the World Postal league, in Washington, to be held in the rooms of the Washington chamber of commerce on February 22. James L. Cowles, who has called the meeting, was one of the foremost agitators for the parcel post system now in operation.

It is the belief of Cowles and his associates that the federation of the world can be accomplished better by a world-wide postal service and parcel post service, unhampered by national boundaries, than, perhaps, by peace treaties, proposals for universal disarmament or appeals to The Hague tribunal. A better understanding between the peoples of all nations would grow as a result of such a world postal service, it is said, just as the same result was attained in the United States by the removal of state tariffs and the establishment of a common postal service in this country.

On this phase of the question, Cowles writes: "When Washington and his peers met at Philadelphia in 1787, they found our thirteen states on the verge of war with each other by reason of the hostile tariff laws and other restrictions which they had placed upon their interstate intercourse. To prevent this and to insure the peace and prosperity of all the people of all the states, they proposed a general federation with no legal obstacles to intercourse between the peoples of the different states, and the binding of them together by a common postal service."

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

INCOME TAX RULING.

Corporation Must Pay on Lobby and Campaign Expenses.

Washington, Feb. 8.—In a synopsis of income tax regulations just made public, Commisisoner Osborn, of the international revenue bureau, explained that money expended by corporations for lobbying or campaign contributions can not be deducted as expenses in making returns. He also made it clear that dividends on corporation bonds would be subject to the tax both as part of the corporation's net earnings and as the income of bondholders. Mr. Osborn announced he would issue hereafter monthly synopsis of rulings for information of collectors and taxable citizens and corporations.

Mrs. Charles P. Josse will entertain her music class pupils and their parents at her home, 825 Washington boulevard west, on Monday evening. A number of the pupils will give a program.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Luke 6 :17-30.

17 And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God.

22 Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.

25 Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you.

28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

29 And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

At the Half-Way Post.

The Indiana legislature this week begins the last half of the present assembly session, and it is certain to be the busier half of the biennial spasm of law-making for we Hoosier folk. There has been during the first four weeks of the session about the usual flood of new bills, about the average amount of time killed in skirmishing and polite preliminaries, and the legislators must now settle down to business if they expect to dispose of the mass of legislation on the schedule.

The outstanding accomplishment of the early portion of the session is, of course, the anti-lobby law. Already we find ourselves in a maze of doubt regarding the interpretation of the statute, which has just been signed by Governor Ralston, but there is hope that the law will largely accomplish its purpose in compelling the professional lobbyist to come out in the open and do his fighting, either for or against any pending measure. That will be highly desirable from the people's point of view, even though it is a trifle tough on those patriots who have managed heretofore to make a living by exercising "pulls" either real or imaginary, with the Indiana law-makers.

The coming four weeks in the legislature will be of marked interest because of the fact that at least half a dozen big issues must be met and disposed of. These include the bill for state-wide prohibition, the plan for flood-prevention, workmen's compensation, tax reform, primary election reform and the question of reforming the Indiana registration law. Four bills on workmen's compensation are already under consideration by the committee. Tax reform is taken up in one of the twenty-two proposed amendments to the constitution. Half a dozen bills dealing with proposed registration changes are pending, and following Mr. Bryan's address there will doubtless be offered a number of bills providing for the state-wide primary, though the democratic majority in the legislature is by no means a unit in favoring a move of this character. The job cut out for the Indiana legislature in the remaining half of its session is big enough to engage the attention of the membership down to the last moment of the term. There is no time to be wasted on by-play or trivialities.

Sheldon Livingston lives on a farm near the little hamlet of Porcupine, Wis. There are reasons why you ought to know him. Sheldon is 11 years old. The schoolhouse is two miles from the Livingston home. Morning and night, through snow, rain or shine, Sheldon walked this distance, swinging his dinner pail and his school books. In four and a half years he has not missed a day! Think of this, city children, you who complain when you have to walk four blocks; who stay home every chance you get, clap your hands every time there's a holiday and would play hookey all the time, if you dared! Now we have no idea what kind of a man Sheldon Livingston will make. He may become president of the United States or only a plain citizen living on a Wisconsin farm. But one thing is certain. In whatever niche in life it shall be his destiny to be placed he will be a steady, punctual, dependable person—the kind you won't have to watch. To borrow a phrase from the stable, he'll stand without being hitched.

Diplomats in Washington are manifesting much interest in the European trip of Col. E. M. House, of New York, close friend of President Wilson, who has just landed in England "on a tour of the capitals of Europe." Despite denials from the white house, there is a strong suspicion that Colonel House may be a sort of informal peace envoy of the president to sound out the possibilities of a peace dicker to end the war. It must be admitted that it is quite impossible to conceive any mission of pleasure or mere love of travel that could lure one to the European centers at this time. If Colonel House as the spokesman of President Wilson is going to attempt to negotiate peace, more power to him!

"A City of 550,000—Modern, Historic, Growing and Full of Promise—A Surprise and a Delight to Visiting Americans, Who Know Almost Nothing of It—Cubans Dislike Us and Prefer German Wares"—A Search for the Reason.

(Roger W. Babson, world-renowned business expert, writer and statistician, now in South America, has been commissioned to tell "the truth about South America" in a series of articles, of which this is the first. Another article by Mr. Babson will appear in a day or two. Watch for it.)

(By Roger W. Babson.)

Havana, Cuba, Feb. 8.—The first surprise one always gets when entering Havana (or Habana, as it is spelled in Cuba) is the architecture of the island.

We are apt to think of Cuba as new territory and of Havana, Santiago and Matanza as "coming cities."

When we go to Spain we expect to see low, stone houses, with red-tiled roofs and pink or blue walls. We do not think, however, of seeing a quaint Spanish city within three days' sail from New York.

"How queer and picturesque everything looks," said a group of American business men to me as our Red Star steamship Kroonland entered the beautiful harbor of Havana and passed Moro castle.

"We did not expect to see such old Spanish architecture down here," they remarked. "Why, we should think we were entering the old port of Cadiz, in Spain, or passing along the coast of Italy!"

Yes, these American millionaires, owners of great factories in the United States—men who are presidents of big corporations for which, perhaps, you yourself work—had never before realized that Cuba is almost as old as Spain itself!

In fact, Cuba is simply "Little Spain," while Havana and the other Cuban cities are as truly Spanish as are the ancient towns of the old world, about which Columbus wandered when a boy.

I repeat this conversation on shipboard, as it, perhaps, illustrates better than anything else one reason why we don't sell more goods in Cuba.

The truth is that American manufacturers don't know Cuba.

The American people don't know Cuba. Even some American school teachers don't know Cuba. As I turn to my child's geography I find nothing to show that Cuba is a quaint old land with queer, set customs. No, our manufacturers and business men think of Cuba as a "new possession," a new island which has just come up from the bottom of the ocean or as a new territory, like Oklahoma, which has just been opened for settlement.

And this is why our business men do not sell more goods in Cuba. When they treat the Spanish merchants of Cuba with the respect and consideration to which they are entitled—by history and position—then there will be more work for the factories of the United States.

What of Havana.

The principal city of Cuba is Havana, which can now be reached in five hours from Key West, Fla.

It has beautiful temperature; it is most stragetically located.

The harbor is one of the best in the world. There is nothing against Havana which I can think of excepting the hotel charges! If you visit Havana bring along a tent, for the hotel charges are fearfully high!

I believe Havana is destined to become a very healthful city. Although the authorities would not let me land, when I was here last year because a rat had the bubonic plague, yet these unsanitary conditions will not long exist.

Some day an American will take a ship load of rat traps to Cuba and catch them all! However, with the exception of a South American city about which I will tell you in a later article, I know of no other city where I had rather buy real estate today than in Havana.

The population of Havana is 550,000. It has fine streets, electric lights, sewers, municipal water and other improvements.

Five high office buildings are now being built, and one sees as many automobiles on The Prado as on the boulevards of any American city.

I don't like to lose money any more than do you, but I am willing to bet on Havana.

What of the Cubans?

Last evening, as I was walking about the Plaza listening to the music, an American manufacturer, who is traveling with me, said: "Babson, I wonder why it is that these Cubans so dislike us Americans? They seem to forget that we freed them from Spanish rule."

Said I: "Come with me tomorrow and call upon one of the leading merchants of the city and, perhaps, you'll learn why."

"Very well," said he. "I'll gladly go with you in order to learn the truth why these Cubans, at the same price, will buy inferior goods from my German competitors rather than give the orders to me and my other American friends."

The next day we went to a large commission house in one of those old-fashioned "carry-alls," such as our fathers used to drive over cobble-stoned streets—where the paving was laid under Spanish rule many years ago.

Upon reaching my Cuban friend's place of business, the American with me said:

"Why, this isn't much of a place; or at least they have not much business; it seems too quiet."

Now, it really was not lack of business which set my American friend adrift. It was the fact that these Cuban merchants and their employes take life calmly and sensibly.

Instead of working in the hot sun as American employes are often compelled to do in summer time, great awnings and curtains are hung to protect the Cuban clerks from the heat and dust.

Moreover, often these curtains are hung at the outer edges of the sidewalk so as to protect the passer-by. How much pleasanter it would make shopping in your own city in summer if the merchants would adopt these awnings and curtains at their sidewalk's edge so that you could walk in the shade.

Instead of hurrying past the store windows to get out of the sun, you would then leisurely walk along and inspect the window displays.

But instead of doing this, some of the storekeepers in your town pull down the curtains in their store windows and even shut out from view such displays as they have!

"Why," said my American friend, "these clerks look as if they were on a summer vacation—see their light shoes, their white clothes and their comfortable collars! They are not hurrying, perspiring and crowding about as do my employes. It looks to me as if business was pretty dull."

But when the Cuban merchant arrived and stated the monthly output of his store, my American friend was convinced that haste does not always signify good business, nor does perspiration always mean prosperity.

In fact, when this man returns to the United States, I think he will institute changes in his great store so that next summer it will be more attractive to both clerks and customers.

After first talking of general matters (and one must never be so rude with the Latin-American people as to start right in by talking business) the American asked: "Why is it that you don't seem to love us. A Havana merchant told me yesterday that, at the same price, he always purchased of English and German manufacturers."

Thereupon the Cuban became serious,

WHERE IS THE WHEAT?

Pittsburg Dispatch.

Investigation by the federal authorities is bringing out some facts about the wheat situation that will serve to correct much popular misunderstanding. Last year's crop was the largest in our history, 891,000,000 bushels, which, with 77,000,000 carried over from 1913, gave a total available supply of 968,000,000 bushels. Our per capita consumption of flour (one barrel annually, or five bushels of wheat(, is 500,000,000 bushels. To this must be added 840,000,000 bushels for seeding, a total of 584,000,000, which left 316,000,000 bushels available for export.

We have exported from July 1, 1914, to February 1, 1915, 208,000,000 bushels, leaving 108,000,000 bushels that can yet be shipped abroad. Our present shipments average 8,000,000 bushels a week, with no indications of any material increase, so that we have enough to maintain that rate untilsome time in May, or shortly before the 1915 crop is harvested.

Some 4,100,000 acres more winter wheat has been planted than in the previous year, and there is no doubt of a great increase in spring wheat, 100,000,000 bushels or a total crop this year of a billion bushels, double our own consumption without the seeding.

That this condition is not reflected in the price of wheat or in the agitation over the price of bread argues that whatever scarcity has been created is an artificial creation. There is undoubtedly, by these figures, plenty of wheat in the country. The question, then, is where is the wheat? The millers point to the grain men, and the grain men to the farmers. The Department of Justice proposes to find out whether war or speculation is the cause of the present exorbitant prices, and should hasten to do so.

AIRCRAFT FOR SERVICE.

(Indianapolis Star.)

We do not hear much lately about aeroplanes in this country. They do not fill a general want at this time as do automobiles or other land vehicles, and since the novelty has worn off—for pretty much everybody has seen at least one of the aerial machines in flight—they have not attracted general attention.

But interest is taken in them for all that. The Aero Club of America—the name is impressive if the actual organization is not—is planning to encourage the use of aircraft in peaceful pursuits, such as the carrying of mail, by establishing a series of landing stations throughout the country. Admiral Perry, a member of the club, is at work on the selection of points where the stations are to be placed. They will number nearly 2,000 and it is expected to place one near every city of a population exceeding 50,000.

By bringing aeroplanes into common use in this way it is suggested that a reserve of men and flying machines may thus be built up, available, like the militia, in time of war. Orville Wright is pleased with the movement and says the mania for speed has been chiefly responsible for holding back the greater use of the flying machine and manufacturers have given attention to speed before everything else.

With the aeroplane devoted to simpler uses and a moderate speed, no good reason is evident why it should not be made serviceable in many ways. The successful and prolonged flights made in the war abroad will serve to give greater confidence in the staying qualities of the aircraft. And to the assertion on this side of the water that they cannot carry heavy mail sacks the answer will be returned that they often carry two passengers, and that the bombs borne across the North sea by German aeroplanes, as well as by Zeppelins, are probably as heavy as mail. It is not unlikely that the aeroplane will be a frequent traveler across the sky before very long.

CITIES MAY GET BOON.

Indiana Times.

Through the Wood senate bill, No. 184, Indiana cities are offered a chance to vote for themselves to adopt or reject the commission form of city government or the city manager plan for the conduct of municipalities. Nothing more important than this optional bill is to be up at the present session of the legislature..

Any plan by which the people may be enabled to escape the evils or from a enabled to escape from the evils or from a part of the worst evils of the existing system of municipal misgovernment, waste and inefficiency, ought to be greeted by the people with the utmost hopefulness and earnest concern. It is to be hoped that the citizens who are interested in municipal reform and modern progress in city management on business lines will turn out Monday night and make themselves heard at the public hearing on the Wood bill. The hearing is to be at the senate chamber.

It is through the discussion of all phases of the situation that the people finally will arrive at some proper conclusion. If there is a chance to get something better than the existing system it is the duty of the citizen to inform himself and to prepare to take prompt advantage of his opportunity. It is not the idea to force any particular form of government on Indiana cities.The people themselves may adopt the system they wish to adopt. The enactment of a good law granting this opportunity to cities to make positive steps in advance along good government lines would mark the present session of the legislature as monumental in its achievement as a progressive session.

SAVES OTHERS; IS HIMSELF A VICTIM

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 8.—Dr. Theodore Potter, who, it is said, saved hundreds of lives from tuberculosis, succumbed to the disease himself today. He was a pioneer of the bacteriological theory of medicine and was known throughout the central west for his fight on tuberculosis which he did not give up until too weak to continue to visit his parents. He was 54 years old.

Van Auken Refutes Charge.

Senator Van Auken, also a member of the committee, took the floor in the absence of Senators Clarke and Elsener and refuted the charges made by the minority leader.

"This bill was considered in committee and I myself voted to report it out to the senate, and Senator Robinson was at that meeting before I was. What is more, the bill was considered on more than one day," said Senator Van Auken. Robinson's motion to recommit the bill lost, whereupon he moved the second reading of the bill be deferred until tomorrow. His motion carried, with several members of the majority supporting it.

Efforts to Huryy.

Efforts in both houses to hurry the business along featured the sessions this morning. Senator VanNuys, president pro tem, who presided over the senate in the absence of Lieut. Gov. O'Neill, stopped the roll call for bills on second reading after it had advanced about half way and asked the senators to call their bills up, in order that they could be disposed of this week. He also asked the chairmen of the different committees to get their bills reported out as soon as possible and called their attention to the senate rules which require that all senate bills be reported within six days of their introduction. He said there was more than 100 bills now in the hands of committees and that every one of them must be acted on in one way or the other this week. More than thirty bills were given second reading and placed in readiness for final consideration in the two houses, following the request of the presiding officer. Eighteen new bills, nine in each house, were introduced.

Some Important Bills.

Bills to pension state teachers, to prevent the collusion of bidders for public contracts, to make street railway franchises and other utilities subject to taxation, to abolish certain legal holidays, to give cities of the fifth class the right to use school lands for public parks and to regulate the number of passenger trains stopping daily at certain stations were the more important pieces of legislation asked for.

The bill to pension state teachers, which was drafted by the State Teachers' association, was introduced in the senate and house by Representative Friend. Senator Kattman's bill provides that wherever there is any railroad more than forty miles in length and built with the aid of not less than two townships in counties through which it runs it shall provide not less tha ntwo trains daily going each way to stop at all stations in such county.

Persons or corporations who are responsible for fires or for their spreading shall be liable for the cost of extinguishing them, according to a bill introduced by Senator Wood, where it is shown that such fires were due to their negligence or their non-compliance with any fire ordinance of a city or such law of a state. The bond of city judges, city comptroller, city attorney, members of the board of public works, commissioners of the board of public safety and the chief of police in cities of the third class is named at $1,000 in Senator Reser's bill.

A city or town annexing territory, Senator McCormick's bill provides, shall be liable for the proportion of the unpaid outstanding indebtedness of the civil township that the assessed value of property in such annexed territory is to the total valuation of all property in such township.

Sschool property that has become abandoned in cities of the fifth class may be utilized by the city for the use of public parks, with the consent of the school authorities, Senator Fleming's bill provides.

A caucus of the democratic members of the senate was announced for this afternoon. The Stotsenburg constitutional amendments will be considered at this meeting.

communication. While the incident was discussed with interest in official and diplomatic quarters there was no indication of what development it might take.

Naval officers recalled that the navy regulations permit a warship to fly another flag than its own, but specifically provides that it must be hauled down and the ship's own flag must be hoisted before a shot is fired. There are many incidents in naval history where that has been done, the latest being the German sea rover Emden, which hoisted the Japanese flag just before making a daring raid at Penang. Experts in naval procedure recalled no case, however, where a merchantman was involved.

It was recalled in naval circles here today that when Captain Glass, commanding the cruiser Charleston, on his way to the Philippines with a convoy of troops, stopped and captured Guam, he ordered the Japanese flag to be flown on his flagship and on the ships of his flotilla. He signalled this message to the steamers Australia, Pending and Sydney merchant ships under charter to the government and in use as troop ships, "Passing signal station at Guam Charleston will hoist Japanese colors; other vessels same or none."

The deception was aided by the fact that the Charleston was similar in appearance to the Japanese cruiser Naniwa.

JUDGE YAPLE IS NOT IN A WILD SCRAMBLE

Judge Carl Yaple, of the Allen county superior court, is not in any scramble for appointment to the vacancy on the bench of the Indiana appellate court occasioned by the death of Judge Frank M. Powers and is merely a receptive candidate should Governor Ralston care to consider him. Judge Yaple stated Monday that, like any ambitious lawyer and jurist, he would regard the appointment as a splendid company and would accept, but that he was not in any sense working for it. Many of Judge Yaple's friends in the Twelfth district, however, have taken matters into their hands so far as to telegraph Governor Ralston urging consideration of Judge Yaple's name.

nine years. It was fully insured and at County Superintendent D. O. McComb's office the loss is estimated at $4,000, taking into consideration that there will be no salvage as the walls are not strong enough to rebuild upon.

Roof Falls In.

As the people summoned by the alarm stood watching the fire a short time after the building had been vacated, the roof crashed in and until the flames devoured everything in sight the interior was a roaring furnace.

Estimates and plans will immediately be secured for a new school in the district and it is estimated that $8,000 will be expended, as it will be as near modern in its appointments as it is possible to make a school outside the city.

Superintendent D. O. McComb visited the scene of the fire Monday afternoon and gave full instructions for continuing the studies at the church.

LAKESIDE CELLARS EMPTIED.

Open Sewer Valve Found to Be Cause of Influx of Water.

The new sewer pumps in Lakeside are performing admirably and the cellars whose owners complained of an influx of water have been drained. So well are the pumps working that they have to be closed down at intervals to permit sufficient accumulation of water to feed them. The trouble was found to be that instead of closing the valve of the Morton street sewer last week it had been turned the wrong way and opened to its capacity. The consequence was that the tide in the Maumee river was backing into the Lakeside sewers. The condition was found by Councilman Jacob Agne, who started on an investigation of his own. When the valve had been properly closed the water was taken out by the pumps and the cellar flooding ceased.

EXTRA SESSION IF SENATE HOLDS OUT

Congestion Must Clear Up to Avoid It, is Now the Belief.

Washington, Feb. 8.—President Wilson told callers today he was making every effort to avoid an extra session of congress. To Representative Borland, of the Missouri delegation, who asked him to speak in Kansas City on his contemplated trip to San Francisco in March, the president said he wanted to prevent the necessity for calling an extra session, but had not finally determined on his course.

Senator Williams told the president he favored an extra session if the shipping bill were defeated through a filibuster, while other senators opposed an extra session for any purpose.

Speaker Clark, Representative Underwood and Democratic Leader-elect Kitchen, at a conference today, over the legislative situation, agreed that if the congestion in the senate continues a week an extra session was virtually certain. They estimated that the ship bill could pass by a majority of 15 to 20 votes in the house under a special rule, with probably two or three days of debate.

Pink and white were the colors of the decoration, the nut baskets and candies and the lively birthday cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gilmartin, of West Wayne street, were given a surprise on Friday evening by the members of a card club to which they belong. The day selected was because that was the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gilmartin. The company was invited by Catherine and Angela Gilmartin, the small daughters of the family, and they planned and executed their plans with as much success as older people might have done.

Seven years old on Saturday was the occasion for a birthday party in honor of Helen Buck on Saturday. The party was at the home of Miss Helen, 1022 St. Mary's avenue. Although a little early it was a valentine party and beautiful things in red from red ribbons and paper hearts to the candles on the birthday cake were in that color. Peanut dolls dressed in red, paper caps from "snappers," heart shaped cakes with red cherry trimmings and numerous other things that children like all contributed to the good time.

A novelty feature at the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Jones, of Hoagland avenue, on Saturday evening in honor of their guest, Mrs. Brooks, of Greenfield, Mass., and also in celebration of the thirteenth anniversary of their own wedding, was the progression between courses from one table to another of the six laid. There were courses for the dinner so that during its progression everyone had an opportunity to sit at the table with the hosts of the evening. The tables were decorated with carnations and narcissus. After dinner bridge was enjoyed. The fact of the anniversary day was not mentioned by the hostess when invitations were issued, but the secret leaked out and when the guests arrived they bore some sort of a pretty or valuable souvenir of the occasion.

Ted Beeks Erick, jr., was four years old on Saturday and his grandmother, Mrs. Beeks Erick, of Brackenridge street, gave a beautiful party in Ted's honor in the afternoon. Among the games for the good time was feeding a leaf of lettuce to Peter Rabbit. Music and other games helped along the fun with Ted's mother, Mrs. Gray Erick, and Miss Marjorie Erick and Miss Helen Watt assisting. A lovely table to look at at supper time had a plenty of good things to eat. Festoons of red hearts hung from the chandelier to the corners of the table, where candles, hooded in red, cast a pretty glow on the table. A birthday cake was an indication of the sweet things there were. A fish pond held gifts for the guests. The children present were Martha and Jane McBride, Elizabeth and Emma Averill, Marjorie Reed, Mary Louise Metzner, James Wolf, Walter McComb, Wayne Parnam, Buster Walter, James Heit, John Malay, Peter Certia and Marguerite Leighty, of St. Joe.

N.Y. Stage Letter by Norman

O. P. HEGGIE AS ANDROCLES AND PHIL DWYER AS THE LION.

New York, Feb. 8.—The lion is by far the most interesting character in Bernard Shaw's latest play, "Androcles and the Lion," produced at Wallack's theatre by Granville Barker, and acted by an excellent English company.

The lion never says a word. Therein lies his great charm. The other characters have lines. These lines, in the main, tend to bring great confusion to the mind of the hearer. This unfortunate person tries to figure out what Shaw is driving at. In some of Shaw's plays, this is possible, some of the time.

But in "Androcles and the Lion" there arises again the dark suspicion, always held by some cynics regarding Shaw, that he isn't driving at anything, and that at the bottom of each deep pool of persiflage there is nothing to be found but a sinister Shavian chuckle.

To the auditor who does not trouble his head over the matter of what Shaw means, but merely watches what his characters do, a most entertaining play is unfolded. That it bewildered, baffled and shocked London and Berlin was merely because London and Berlin chose to be bewildered, baffled and shocked. New York is amused, and properly so.

The story concerns three Christian martyrs condemned to perish in the Roman arena. One of them, Ferrovius, a giant, forgets his Christian meekness and kills six gladiators when they set upon him. The emperor pardons him and appoints him to the Praetorian guard. His sister, Lavinia, has, by her physical charms, won the heart of a captain in Caesar's army, and she, too, is pardoned.

The third, Androcles, offered to a hungry lion, is recognized by the lion as the person who once pulled a thorn from his paw. Which being the case, the lion not only foregoes his meal, but joyously embraces Androcles, who, too, is pardoned by the emperor. The only Christian who suffers martyrdom is one who tries to recant, but dashes through the wrong door and is devoured.

And there you are. "Write your own ticket."

Barker has given the play the simplified and beautiful settings which are now revolutionizing the European stage. They are wonderfully effective.

AT THE TEMPLE.

The Temple has "The empters" this week. That's enough to tell readers that are familiar with burlesque but for the information of others it might be stated that "he Tempters" have Max Fields, Charlie Baker and Charlie Cole doing the comedy roles, Ruth Everett, Alice Gibson and a bevy of other young women in the leading feminine roles. These classy artists are seen in two hugely funny burlettas, "Married for a Day" and "Circus Life," both of them [illegible] with [illegible] song numbers and delightfully entertaining dance features. Mlle Faustina, a ballet dancer, is grace incarnate and her specialty number will be greeted with storms of applause. This young woman looks like a second pavlowa. The production goes wth a rush and a bang that is contagious, carrying the audience right along in the current of fun. It is by far the best burlesque that even the Temple has staged yet.

AT THE NEW PALACE

The New Palace opened its third big Keith week this afternoon with another bill of surpassing merit, one with a wealth of features that presages some royal entertainment. Willard Sims and his company are presenting the roaringly funny comedy sketch "Flinder's Furnished Flat," the act that has been dubbed the funniest in vaudeville and the same act in which the same company made a tour of Germany, Austria and France that was terminated abruptly by the outbreak of the war.

A touch of grand opera will be brought to the New Palace by the Dillon Shallard Famous Opera trio, consisting of Mr. Shallard and two other former grand opera vocalists, who will sing selections from the favorite grand operas.

AT THE COLONIAL

"SHORE ACRES" ENDS TODAY.

Hearn's Pastoral Drama of New England, Finely Staged and Acted.

With Charles A. Stevenson, that brilliant character actor, in the title role, Shubert and Brady have made a most noteworthy adaptation of James A. Hearn's beautiful drama of New England and seashore life, "Shore Acres," and in five reels of interesting motion pictures have visualized in faultless manner this beloved old story.

Tomorrow will mark the appearance of Owen Davis' powerful drama of the Orient, "The Marked Woman," which features the celebrated emotional actress, Barbara Tennant.

AT THE LYRIC.

The Lyric, respendent in its new dress, with the most unique stage setting to be found in any picture house in the middle west, today and tomorrow is presenting the great labor play, "Money." This production was filmed with a view to preaching a sermon on the quarrel between capital and labor and preaching it in an entertaining and therefore powerful manner. Replete with thrilling scenes and with a care and attenion to detail marking the entire production, "Money" tells its story convincingly and sends its appeal across the footlights with force. The play is given in five acts.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

In this day of vulgarity, claptrap and far-fetched entertainment, it is a pleasure to call the attention of our theatergoers to "A Pair of Sixes," the most phenomenally successful farce ever presented in any country during any age. Maybe the rut into which our writers of farce have fallen or maybe the commercialism of the dramatic profession makes this farce more conspicuous—whatever the reason, "A Pair of Sixes" has enjoyed the distinction of making the longest run recorded in New York, to the credit of farcical entertainment. It will be presented at the Majestic tonight.

AT THE EMPRESS.

The ladies who attended the matinee at the Empress this afternoon were the happy recipients of some beautiful souvenirs and also saw a show of great merit. Opening with the appearance of the Davids, who are in a class by themselves as jugglers and slack wire walkers, the show for the first half of the week is of the sort that everybody talks about and long remembers. Sheridan and Williams have a fine line of songs, chatter and jokes. Eddie Raye, with his splendid company, is seen in that great farce comedy offering, "The Cheater." Elliott and Mullin, as "Two Shades of Black," sing and joke and register an emphatic hit. The Fern Bigelow troupe of comedy acrobats please. The motion picures are great.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS LARGELY A MATTER OF CARE.

Irene Estelle Hough

IF YOU TAKE GOOD CARE OF YOUR HANDS, YOU NEED NEVER WORRY ABOUT USING THEM TO WORK.

(By Idah McGlone Gibson.)

A seeker after beauty should always remember that the hands grow ugly and old much sooner than the face.

I think that this is because we wash our hands so much more than we do our faces. There is a natural oil that lubricates the skin and keeps it soft and pliable. If this oil is constantly washed away, then we must supply a manufactured emollient that will do the work of which we have robbed nature.

Very few girls take proper care of their hands. True, more of them nowadays than in our mother's time manicure their nails regularly, but after doing that many of them think all work is done so far as beautifying is concerned.

The hands should be rubbed with some good cold cream every morning after the bath.

A woman with the most beautiful hands I know is over forty, with skin the texture and tint of youth. She has kept them beautiful by soaking them at least once a month in warm olive oil, rubbing them and washing them in the oil.

After the oil bath her hands, wiped dry as possible, are encased in large kid gloves for the night.

If, when you arise each morning, you go through a little exercise of opening and shutting your fingers, one at a time, slowly and tightly, you will find it will make your hands supple.

If you take good care of your hands, you need never worry about using them to work.

The only thing to remember is that, when you wash the oil out of them you must afterwards put some back again.

Don't tan your hands needlessly, for skin, once coarsened, will never [illegible]

GRAPE SHADE OF VELVET FACING FOR YOUR LATE WINTER HAT.

Third "Home Millinery" Lesson.

By Clarissa Chesley.

A lovely grape shade of velvet, or the putty color which is favorite of the season can be used to cover the hat which I am describing in these articles. Black velvet also could be used for the facing.

Start the work of covering by placing the corner of the velvet directly at the front inside the crown. The inside of the brim is fitted and then the velvet cut, leaving at least a half-inch margin to go over the edge.

After milliner's glue has been applied to the velvet and it is smoothed out on the brim, the edge of velvet is carefully turned over and whipped down.

The velvet is next fitted and pasted down on the outside of the brim to within an inch of the edge after allowing another half-inch for the turn-over.

A wire is inserted at the edge and the velvet turned over that. The edges of the inside and the outside are then brought together and sewed through and through with long stitches which slant across invisibly between the edges and short ones through the velvet on the outside. The velvet is slashed on the inside like the frame material and sewed down to the crown wires.

The crown which is a soft tam shape is made of a circle of velvet measuring 14 inches front to back and 13 inches across. This is turned under and gathered over a wire. It is then fastened to the brim.

The seam on the brim must be made on the low side of the hat. The velvet is turned under on each side where it meets for the seam. The edges are then brought together and sewmeet, and are slipstitched together.

The trimmings must be made and put on next and after that the lining maae and sewed in. Directions for this work will be given in the following two lessons.

ALL EYES ON AUCTION MARKET FOR PLAYERS

New York, Feb. 8.—Reports that Roger Bresnahan, Charles Herzogg and Miller Huggins, three club managers, were on their way to the National league meeting here tomorrow promises to be overshadowed by an auction market for players.

Manager Bresnahan, according to reports, wants an infielder and an outfielder. Huggins and Herzogg, reports have it, are in the market for pitchers and fielders who are known as hitters. The chief business arranged for the consideration of the club owners includes proposals to rescind the twenty-one players limit rule and to abolish the March 1 training camp law and a decision about exempting the class AA clubs from draft, the adoption of a playing schedule for next season and a thorough discussion as to the probable dissolution of the national commission which is being advocated now.

There seems little doubt that the player limit rule recently adopted by the league will be rescinded. Also the restriction on training will probably be lifted, as the American league refused to place any ban on this expense. John K. Tener, president of the league, probably will be given the right to act with President Johnson of the American league in the question of exempting from draft all class AA league.

Adopting the schedule will be only a matter of form as the dates have already been arranged.

Grateful Patient Writes About St. Joseph's Hospital

(By E. S. R.)

Having had the privilege of seeing this large building, I want to say a few words in its praise, as many do not know on what a large scale it is conducted, or of the skill, labor and money required to make it the useful institution it is.

This hospital covers nearly a square, it is five stories high, has many nice porches and outer sleeping rooms, heated by an immense heating plant, at a cost of $9,000 or more, making the whole building warm and comfortable.

The many long halls are duplicated in design, white tiled walls and mosaic floors, and many bath rooms. some private, with bed rooms adjoining, hot water in abundance, electric lights and all the modern conveniences.

The first floor is given to offices, a sitting room and kitchenette, and bed rooms. This floor is for men only and they enjoy their cigars and tobacco to their heart's content.

The third floor is for ladies only and you see the feminine touch in all its surroundings—pretty bed rooms, with pictures and many home-like attractions. On all these floors is the kitchenette, or "diet" kitchen, with its many conveniences in the culinary art; also the inspection room, all in dazzling white tile, quiet and restful. The second floor is for both women and men, or for the family. Floor No. 4 has more nice bed rooms, maternity department and old ladies' department, and a few offices, sitting room, kitchenette, etc., etc.

Floor No. 5 is pretty much the same as floors Nos. 3 and 4, with the operating rooms, the X-Ray rooms and offices.

At meal hours you see great activity, dumb waiters going up and down, the sisters hurrying to and fro, carrying trays in countless numbers laden with appetizing food, and if you have not had your dinner or supper, you wish one of the trays belonged to you and if the patient is only a little sick, how you envy him or her! Here is a place where woman predominates. The sisters do all of the work, with a few exceptions, and these outside employes, many have called it home for years, and are loyal to the interests of the institution. They have their barber, shoemaker, electrician, plumber, ice and coal men and the man who does all the buying and their newsboy, who are useful in many ways. All work with zeal, unity, obedience, system and a general good will explains the harmony one sees everywhere.

The old ladies or "grandmas" have a fine corner sitting room on the fourth floor, cheerful and inviting, with easy chairs, pictures and books, and a good outlook from many windows. Dining room, two bed rooms also near, all making it home-like. Christmas eve the sisters arranged a Christmas tree, bright with candles many, and gifts—one given to each old lady, who seemed as pleased as a child might be. The sisters sang Christmas carols which added to the pleasure.

Among them was little Patrick, a boy of ten years, an inmate since his babyhood, both blind and paralyzed, cared for by these good sisters and having the best of care, yet you cannot see him without your heart aching for one so helpless as the future has for him—nothing! The sympathetic priest tried to find for the boy a home in the blind asylum, but was denied, as the child was blind and paralyzed both, a great misfortune, for no chance for learning to read, thus giving some relief to his never-ending night. A dear old lady has been here three years or more, entirely paralyzed, and helpless of course, but she is so patient and grateful for all kindness that she has endeared herself to all and her bell call is always gladly responded to. I could cite a number of charity instances that the good sisters care for. The sister superior in charge on each floor rules not only with great ability, but with tact, and a kind heart, for she knows that the "poor we have with us always."

Near grandma's" rooms comes the baby department, where the mothers are "boarders" for a time. The nursery is light and airy, with pretty cribs on all sides and babies galore!—some crying, some smiling, nurses in pretty caps hurrying to and fro, all seems hurry and bustle, for there is much to do. Tha operating room is one of much interest—'tis a blaze of light from the high ceiling to the floor. The white tiling much in evidence, as if in "bridal array," one party remarked. Everything is planned for expediency and comfort, as our city doctors all know and appreciate as well the skillful aid of a sister who is always on hand to assist in all operations. A sister presides over the X-Ray department and has the sole charge of this chamber of mysteries.

But we will go from the fifth floor to the cellar. Again in its winding ways and closets and large rooms we see the same white tiling and mosaic floor, kept with that cleanliness the sisters are so famous for. You find the big range in the center of a large kitchen and everything needed near. One sister at the head, directing the others —and oh, such good things as they can concoct! Three large fireless cookers and coffee urn, in which ten gallons per day are made (often more). The dough mixer and the ovens, from which many loaves of bread a day are baked, to feed the army of people in their care. You visit the store room, full to the ceiling with bags of flour, canned goods and fruit, all bought by the load. Closets on all sides, with heavy doors. Electric light comes and goes as if by magic at their opening and shutting. These closets are nicely divided for meats, milk, fruit, etc., but the ice plant is king, costing $7,000 or more, doing duty both winter and summer.

From the hospital farm they get all their milk and chickens, make their own butter, so golden, [illegible] cows on said farm, [illegible] (I read of), as the milk is so rich and nice. All their meat is bought on the hoof and they have them butchered, thus securing the best.

There is more of interest here. The laundry in particular, but space forbids. The chapel is located on Main street, with good Father Thomas in charge, entrance is under roof (from the old chapel entrance), quite a comfort in bad weather.

Seeing the many sisters, with bowed heads, and in this modest garb, is a picturesque sight one cannot but admire. Parties who remember the old Rockhill house (once so popular under "Mine Host" Rumsey and son), will see some of the old landmarks in the Main street side entrance—a part now used as a drug store and as the old chapel. If you go above you find the large dining room that was now divided into many compartments, but you recall the halcyon days; it was often used as a ball room, where the belles and beaux, alas, now no more, tripped the light fantastic and you wonder if they ever return to visit in ghostly form these scene of "Auld Lang Syne."

I had the privilege of seeing the manger scene, prepared every Christmas by the sisters. The Christ story is told in miniature in the old chapel, and is very realistic. You see in painting on the wall the shepherds watching their flocks by night, until you can almost fancy you hear the song, "Peace on Earth, Good-Will to Men." You see the sheep on all sides, the oxen and even the faithful shepherd dog, but in the manger the light faces on the infant Jesus, and near the adoring figures of Mary, Joseph and the shepherds all carefully arranged, and showed a world of work and taste, and done with loving hands, I felt assured. I learned that each hall here is presided over by a sister superior, head of many sisters in her division, and all under the mother superior, whose word is law. This is the mother house of Poor Handmaids of Christ, hence her home.

The aim of all hospitals is a most noble one, kind and immediate aid to the sick and helpless. May all prosper and unite in brotherly love, regardless of color and creed, a fitting name for all is the Good Samaritan, as all should be done in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

"He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things, both great and small;
For the dear Lord, who is above,
He made and loveth all."

Tia Juana, Mexico, Feb. 5.—Hundreds of Americans, innocent sight-seers mostly, who have come to this garish little Mexican town, just across the international line from San Diego, Cal., within the past few weeks call it, with reason, "the hell-hole of the continent."

They have gone back to the Panama-California exposition city wiser and sadder individuals.

Some bear the blackjack's brand upon their heads. Many have known the sickening blackness of knockout drops. They have been robbed of whatever gold and valuables they carried, either at the point of a gun in some foul rendezvous of crooks or by the manipulations of sure-thing gamblers, aided by women harpies.

Professional gamblers, thugs, confidence men and bunco steerers from all parts of the United States have made it their stamping ground for the purpose of fleecing San Diego fair visitors during 1915.

Almost without exception these outlaws are American renegrades, not Mexicans. They have gathered like flocking vultures where the picking promises to be good and where laws are lax.

They openly flaunt their crimes in the face of United States officers, standing impotently at the invisible border, powerless to help the victims as they are powerless to punish the outlaws.

Roulette, faro, poker, slot machines, the shell game, fake bull-ring fights, and the wiles of painted women—these are some of the means the allied underworld forces of Tia Juana employ in fleecing unsuspecting American men and women who come here, across the line, "to see Mexico."

Recently a prominent Los Angeles physician reported that he had been stripped of all his money and valuables by the "bull-ring" ruse, engineered by a quartette of crooks. Two men, posing as fellow tourists, lured him to the old arena where two confederates held up the three at the point of revolvers. The highwaymen then split the loot four ways.

Tia Juana's American renegrades maintain shrewd cappers at some of the San Diego hotels, who contrive to meet "lives ones" in quest of "a little spice," and steer them down here to the tender mercies of the hawks. Other [illegible]

Cappers for gamblers at Tia Juan a, Mexico, pulling a victim to the fleecing, and street scene in "the wickedest town."

Some of the smoothest of these cappers are women—of the type calculated to strike up acquaintanceship with men who want to go back home and brag about having had a romance with a charming senorita.

The "senoritas," with carmine lips and eyes dusked to taste, are not Mexicans or girls of Castile. They are well known, many of them, to the police of Chicago, New York, New Orleans or San Francisco. And the "romance" they strike up with the innocents abroad would hardly bear telling about back home, even if the victims were so inclined after having been robbed and perhaps beaten up in some vile hole whence they were lured by pretty bait in petticoats.

Some of these women work among their own sex among the tourists, coaxing them into the gambling joints of this Mexican Monte Carlo with a "tip" that there is easy money to be made at roulette—"and how exciting to tell your friends of your adventures in Mexico!"

It is this hanker of men and women away from their accustomed environment for spicy adventure, as well as the appeal to the gambling lust, that the harpies of Tia Juana have come [illegible] money "by luck" on the part of prospective victims which makes Tia Juana continue to flourish as "the wickedest place on the continent," as it is the gullibility of seekers after clandestine romance which accounts for the "senorita's" part in the fleecing.

NATIONALS PUT UP AN ARTISTIC GAME

Professionals Know How to Play and Will Show Saints—Other Games.

One thing in basket ball is certain.

If the players on the St. Paul aggregation keep their eyes open and their wits working full time they will learn a lot of basket ball Tuesday night when they play the New York Nationals.

This club puts up an artistic article of basket shooting and floor working and none of the independent or college teams has any hope of beating it because it is selected for show purposes and therefore material of the best obtainable has been selected.

Games between evenly matched teams are always interesting whether the players are expert or not and while Fort Wayne and the surrounding towns boast of some dandy clubs they have nothing like this National aggregation. The club works like a well oiled machine and persons interested in basket ball will be highly entertained.

However, the Saints are not there just to look on. They practiced up for the game and are going into the fracas prepared to give the Nationals the best they have in stock.

Saint Mary's and Concordia.

On Wednesday night a disturbance that has been brewing for some time will culminate in a battle between the Concordia five and St. Mary's Athletics.

In the first setto between these organizations the collegians nosed out a victory by a spectacular finish and the Saints are prepared to resist a rush of this kind and if they obtain an advantage in the early stages they will devote themselves to the task of holding it.

On the other hand the Concordia troop does not expect to take any chances. It will go after St. Mary's from the drop of the hat and will not depend upon a warm finish to win the game. Both clubs are said to be in form and the rivalry existing between them is certain to bring about some good basket ball.

Girls Booked With Bluffton.

Bluffton's high school girls' team will be here on Friday night and will play the local high school girls at the Smart gym. The boys are without a game and may play in the preliminary if a club can be booked for the occasion.

BY JACK JUNGMEYER.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 8.—The fighting rivalry between two great speed kings which is expected to reach its climax in the Vanderbilt cup race at the exposition here February 22, also promises to make this the last as well as the most spectacular of the contests for this coveted trophy.

De Palma and Grant!

They are the men about whom the drama of the forthcoming event revolves with most intensity.

Both have twice won the $5,000 cup. Either one needs win it but once more to retain it permanently.

Ralph De Palma was among the first to file entry. Harry Grant has unofficially announced that he would come in, as have more than 25 other famous mahouts of America and Europe.

De Palma is the logical favorite. Not only has he two Vanderbilt events and one second prize to his credit, but he also won third in the 1911 Savannah Grand Prix and has the distinction of being the first man to cover the entire Vanderbilt course without a stop.

His best average speed, made at Santa Monica, Cal., last year, was 75.05 miles per hour. In 1913 at Milwaukee, where he also won, he averaged 69.97 miles.

His top speed was an average of 65.18 miles an hour.

There is therefore, a difference of about 10 miles an hour average in favor of De Palma over his speedy rival's best time.

To prevent the troph for which scores of intrepid mahouts have risked their lives since 1904 from passing beyond the realm of competition, the 25 or 30 other contestants may be expected to force the going to an even more desperate pace this year.

The situation has raised interest to the most intense pitch throughout the sporting world, and a crowd of at least 200,000 is expected to witness what may very likely be the last of the present Vanderbilt cup races. The grandstand alone will seat 55,000.

Because of the shortness of the exposition course and the sharp turns necessitated by the big fair palaces that bound part of the speedway, the element of danger to the drivers has been greatly magnified.

Heretofore the shortest Vanderbilt cup course has been about eight miles to the lap; here it is less than four, necessitating twice as many turns. The 300-mile race will be completed in 75 loops.

With an average of three minutes to the loop, the racers will be in view of the vast audience practically all the time.

Either De Palma's or Grant's winning of this contest will call for the donation of a new cup or the termination of this blue-ribbon event of the auto world.

Already this contingency has been anticipated and W. L. Houghson, chairman of the exposition racing committee, has sounded out W. K. Vanderbilt jr. as to his intentions. A new trophy will in all likelihood be donated.

The present $5,000 gold cup was tendered by Vanderbilt in 1904, and was first won by George Heath at Long Island with an average speed of 52.2 miles per hour.

The Grand Prix race will be run over the exposition course on Feb. 27, just five days after the Vanderbilt. All entrants are listed for both events.

YOUNGSTOWN LINED UP BY PRESIDENT

Central League Will Have Club There According to Annoucement.

Youngstown, O., Feb. 8.—Youngstown is going to have Central league baseball this summer, according to an announcement made by President Louis Heilbroner and George O'Neil, owner of the Erie franchise. These gentlemen made a complete canvass of some of the representative business men and they claim there will be plenty of support for the club. A temporary organization will be formed within a few days, at which time those connected with the proposition will hold an election and decide upon an executive.

Heilbroner and O'Neil have gone to their home. They will no doubt return here in a few days to straighten out some matter pertaining to the local situation, such as closing for Wright field. In this connection, O'Neil expects to meet Paul Powers in Pittsburg, to formally close the deal for the lease.

President Heilbroner announced that he would complete negotiations in Wheeling within a few days. According to the promoters the outlook is bright and a classy team is expected here. Curley Blount will be made manager of the local team.

At the meeting Heilbroner declared the Central league would open on April 21, and would no doubt close one week before Labor day, or on September 1 to be exact. The schedule has not been adopted as yet but this will be done at a meeting of the magnates planned for the latter part of this month.

MATCHED WITH MURPHY.

Hal Stewart will have a real tryout on Feb. 26 at Toledo, when he takes on Harlem Tommy Murphy, the best of the second string lightweights in the country. Manager George Biemer has arranged the match and Stewart is preparing himself for the go. Negotiations have been opened with Freddie Welsh for a match here and Stewart has been picked to oppose him.

COOMBS SAYS HE'S COMING BACK SURE

Declines to Believe That He's Through and is Working Hard.

Jack Coombs, former mainstay of Connie Mack's world championship pitching staff, refuses to believe that he is through. Coombs, who has signed to pitch for the Brooklyn Nationals this year, is spending the winter in conditioning himself for the diamond campaign. He declares that he will report in ship shape.

Coombs came from Colby college, joining the Athletics in 1906. He gained fame as a pro at the very beginning of his career by pitching the longest major league game on record. It was a 24-inning contest and he beat the Red Sox, 4 to 1.

In 1910 he won 31 out of 40 games and created a new American league shutout record. He also pitched 53 consecutive scoreless innings, a record which Walter Johnson beat in 1913, when he pitched 56 innings without a run being tagged on him. To complete a fine season, Jack won three games against the Cubs in the 1910 world's series.

Coombs continued a marvel of the twirler's art until the 1911 world's series when he suffered a severe injury. He had beaten the Giants early in the series, and had the fifth game almost won, the score being 3 to 0, and the Giants had made only two hits up to the seventh inning, when something snapped in Jack's anatomy. The score was tied on Coombs in the ninth inning and the Giants won on Plank in the tenth.

WORKING OUT A NEW SCHEDULE OF RATES

A new schedule of rates for the city light and power works is under consideration by Mayor Hosey and the board of works and it contemplates a further reduction. Secretary-Manager John Wessel and Superintendent Frank Dix have framed a tentative schedule that is now undergoing a careful examination. For some time a further reduction of rates has been contemplated and the schedule has been prepared with that object. Just what the reduction will be and when it is likely to become effective the mayor and board are not prepared to say.

The board, pursuant to request of the lighting department, will before long have plans prepared and advertisement made for bids to furnish the lighting department with a new 800 horse-power high pressure boiler to take the place of two 300 horse-power boilers. It is designed to have this installed by some time early in the fall.

FOUND GUILTY OF UNNATURAL CRIME

Jonas Fry Convicted by the Testimony of His Own Child.

Jonas Fry, a teamster aged 40 years, was found guilty, Monday afternoon, in the circuit court of a shocking and unnatural crime against his daughter, Margaret Fry, aged 15. The trial was one of the most revolting ever heard in the circuit court and there was a suffocating mob of men of all ages there to listen to the testimony. It was shown that on Christmas eve Fry, after plying his daughter with whisky until she was helplessly drunk, subjected her to abuse of a description that is not printable. In a brief summary of the evidence the court declared there was no doubt of Fry's guilt and so entered judgment. P. B. Colerick, attorney for Fry, made a motion for a new trial and sentence was thereupon deferred until Wednesday. The mother of Fry's children is dead. The family had been living in terrible squalor in the old "Beehive" on West Superior street prior to Fry's arrest.

Property Ordered Sold.

By an entry in the superior court Judge Yaple has ordered that the property of the Sprang Clay Products company, of Sheldon, this county, be sold at sheriff's sale to satisfy creditors. The citizens want a court and the commissioners have the petition under advisement.

The suit of Loa Hooker vs. Walter Hooker for divorce and a restraining order has been dismissed from the superior court. The same defendant filed a new complaint against her husband Saturday and the older complaint was the one disposed of.

In the circuit court Judge Eggman ordered Charles Donnelly to pay $10 a month to the support of his child and released him on his own recognizance after warning him that if he was again brought before the court for neglect he probably would be sent to the penitentiary.

SHOP AND RAIL ROAD NEWS

WAS FORMER FORT WAYNE RESIDENT

Local Nickel Plate officials were shocked yesterday by news of the death of Mrs. C. L. Titus at Conneaut, Ohio, Saturday. She was the wife of Charles L. Titus, assistant to the superintendent of the Eastern division of the Nickel Plate, former trainmaster of the Chicago division, with headquarters in Fort Wayne. Besides the husband, Mrs. Titus is survived by a son, who is assistant manager of the Goodrich Company, of New York. The funeral will be held at Conneaut at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and will be attended by officials and railway men from many of the cities on the line of the Nickel Plate. Mr. and Mrs. Titus lived here a year, having quarters at an apartment house on East Main street. They moved to Conneaut in the latter part of November, 1913, when Mr. Titus was promoted to his present position.

EDUCATING APPRENTICES.

Pennsylvania Maintains Four Schools for the Purpose.

The Pennsylvania railroad believes in brains. It has been making investments in brains since the company's charter was granted in 1846. Five years ago it made another such investment in the brains of its youngest shopmen through the opening of an apprentice school at the Altoona, Pa., shops. Thirty pupils were enrolled then.

Today the company is sending 300 young men to school and paying them for the time they spend there. Three branch schools have been opened, and so great has been the success of the whole experiment that plans are now under way to extend the school work to all of the shops on the eastern lines of the Pennsylvania system where apprentices may be employed.

Thus far 151 apprentices have completed the full three-year course and have been graduated from the schools. Approximately 60 more will be added to this number by the class going out this year.

The school courses supplement the trade instruction which all apprentices in the shop receive. The teaching is intended to add to the efficiency of the trained hand and eye by providing a trained mind.

The three branch schools which have been established since the formation of the original class are at Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Wilmington, Del. Approximately one-third of the apprentice pupils attend the branches, while two-thirds are at the main school at Altoona, where a special building has been erected and equipped.

All shop apprentices in the four cities mentioned are required to attend as special apprentices. The latter are young men who have completed technical college courses and who are receiving experience to train them for official positions.

The shop schools are intended for those apprentices who have had the advantage of college training, and these form a large majority of the whole. The subjects taught cover the essential principles required in trade work, and all of the teaching is planned with a severely practical purpose in view, namely, to impart the knowledge that can be profitably utilized by a highly skilled workman. No more theory is taught the apprentice than is necessary for intelligent understanding.

The studies of the shop school apprentice include, in general, mathematics, mechanics and drawing, with as much of English and elementary science as is warranted in schools whose primary object is specific trade education.

WABASH SECTION FOREMEN

Gather Here to Discuss Track Building and Maintenance.

Nearly every section foreman on the Peru division of the Wabash attended two meetings at the Star theater hall yesterday morning and afternoon, called for the discussion of the various methods of building and maintaining the tracks with a view of getting at the best and putting it in practical use. Charles Palmer, road supervisor, presided at the meeting and read a paper on "A Model Section and How to Keep It." There were other speakers, among them J. B. Carr, chief clerk to Division Engineer W. S. Danes, who talked on making reports and gave a number of statistics to show the cost of the upkeep of a mile of track. Questions were asked and discussed concerning the maintenance of track, the cost of putting in a new and improved type of switch and other matters. Road Supervisor Palmer said that it was the intention to hold these meetings every month or six weeks and that the next one will be at Montpelier. One of the men in attendance yesterday was Chris Fosler, for many years section foreman of the Fort Wayne district, but now at White House. He took advantage of the opportunity to meet a number of his old associates.

A telegram from Mrs. C. A. Contant, who is with her husband at the Mayo sanitarium in Rochester, Minn., states that Mr. Contant passed through a surgical operation Friday afternoon, which the surgeons regards as very successful. The message did not state the character of the disease with which Mr. Contant is afflicted, but merely stat[illegible] that the operation was successful [illegible] the patient doing as well as could be expected. Mrs. Contant and son, Fireman Henry F. Contant, accompanied Mr. Contant to Rochester and will remain there until he is ready to come home.

CO-OPERATIVE PLAN IS A GO.

E. S. Phillips, of the Indiana Co-Operative store, of Indianapolis, who has been here two or three weeks in the interest of a proposed store in this city, and the men who have assisted him, are of the opinion that the project will be carried to a successful end. Mr. Phillips has visited all of the unions and says that nearly all have subscribed to the store fund and that a number of individual members have taken stock. The machinists, who, on account of other business, were unable to take up the store proposition last Monday night, will discuss it at a special meeting in the Aldine hall Tuesday night.

Mr. Wardrop expects to go to Philadelphia to see Billy Sunday, the evangelist, who is conducting meetings in that city, before he returns home. They have been warm friends for a number of years.

TOO FAST FOR PRESIDENT.

B. F. Horner Relates Story of Railroad Experience.

B. F. Horner, whose signature and title of general passenger agent appears on every ticket of the Nickel Plate, is a real veteran of the railroad world. As young man, Mr. Horner enlisted in a northern regiment at the outbreak of the civil war, fought the four years of conflict and at the close of the war went into the railroad business, then comparatively in its infancy. His first position of importance was as a conductor on the old Pere Marquette.

One of his favorite stories tell of an experience while in the employ of that road. "It was a rough road then, the old P. M.," says Mr. Horner. "Even some railroads had to serve as the butt of vaudeville jokes. It used to convulse audiences to see a comedian come out on the stage with a coffin strapped on his back and hear him explain he was 'going traveling on the Pere Marquette and aimed to save the undertaker some trouble.'

"But the traveling public hadn't been educated as yet to finely ballasted roadbeds and all-steel rolling stock and no one objected very strenuously.

"I had one of the 'crack' runs, a 'first-class' train that frequently was honored by carrying high officials of the road. One day the word went out that the president of the company himself, was to go down the line on my run. The P. M., it appears, was bidding on the purchase of a small branch line and the president was to put in the bid. It was imperative that he reach his destination on time.

"The 'old man's' private car was coupled to my train and we started out. Things began to go wrong. The engine was suffering from some ailment and seemed just to limp along. The train, with the president's car attached, was heavy. Still we did our best and managed to attain a speed of as much as thirty miles an hour.

"After an hour or so of running, I was summoned to the president's car.

"'You know,' he said, 'I'm in a hurry. Don't you suppose you can run a little faster?'

"I promised to do my best and went up to the engine for a consultation with the engineer. Together, we doctored up the old 'teapot' until she was clipping off the rail-joints at about forty-five miles an hour.

"But when I went back through the train, my coaches were behaving like ships at sea. The passengers, for the most part, were hanging to the seat-arms for dear life, with white, set faces.

"Then came another summons from the president's car and I picked my way back to the rear end.

"The 'old man's' car presented a startling appearance. Chairs were overturned and one of the chandeliers lay on the floor. The president himself was propped against the side, clinging to a window frame.

"'Say,' he roared, "go up front and choke that fellow down! This is an important trip, but I don't think it's so d——d important as all this.'"

Mrs. Thomas Gorman, of 512 Masterson avenue, wife of a Pennsylvania shopman, was taken home from St. Joseph hospital today. Mrs. Gorman was operated upon a week or more ago at St. Joseph hospital and is rapidly regaining complete health.

Ellis Deahl, who had been visiting his relatives in this city, left for Cleveland yesterday. He is secretary to R. W. Mitchener, superintendent of transportation, at present. For several years he was employed in the trainmasters' offices in this city.

J. J. Stephens and A. B. Conn, Nickel Plate conductors, who had been sick a week, reported for work this morning. Conductors W. O. Miller, C. F. Herdwidge and Harry Crance, who had been off duty looking after private matters, also reported for work today.

District Passenger Agent F. P. Parnin, of the Nickel Plate, says the sentiment is almost unanimously in favor of the proposed passenger rate increase in his territory. He has just completed a trip in the interest of the movement and addressed a meeting called for the discussion of the proposed legislative move.

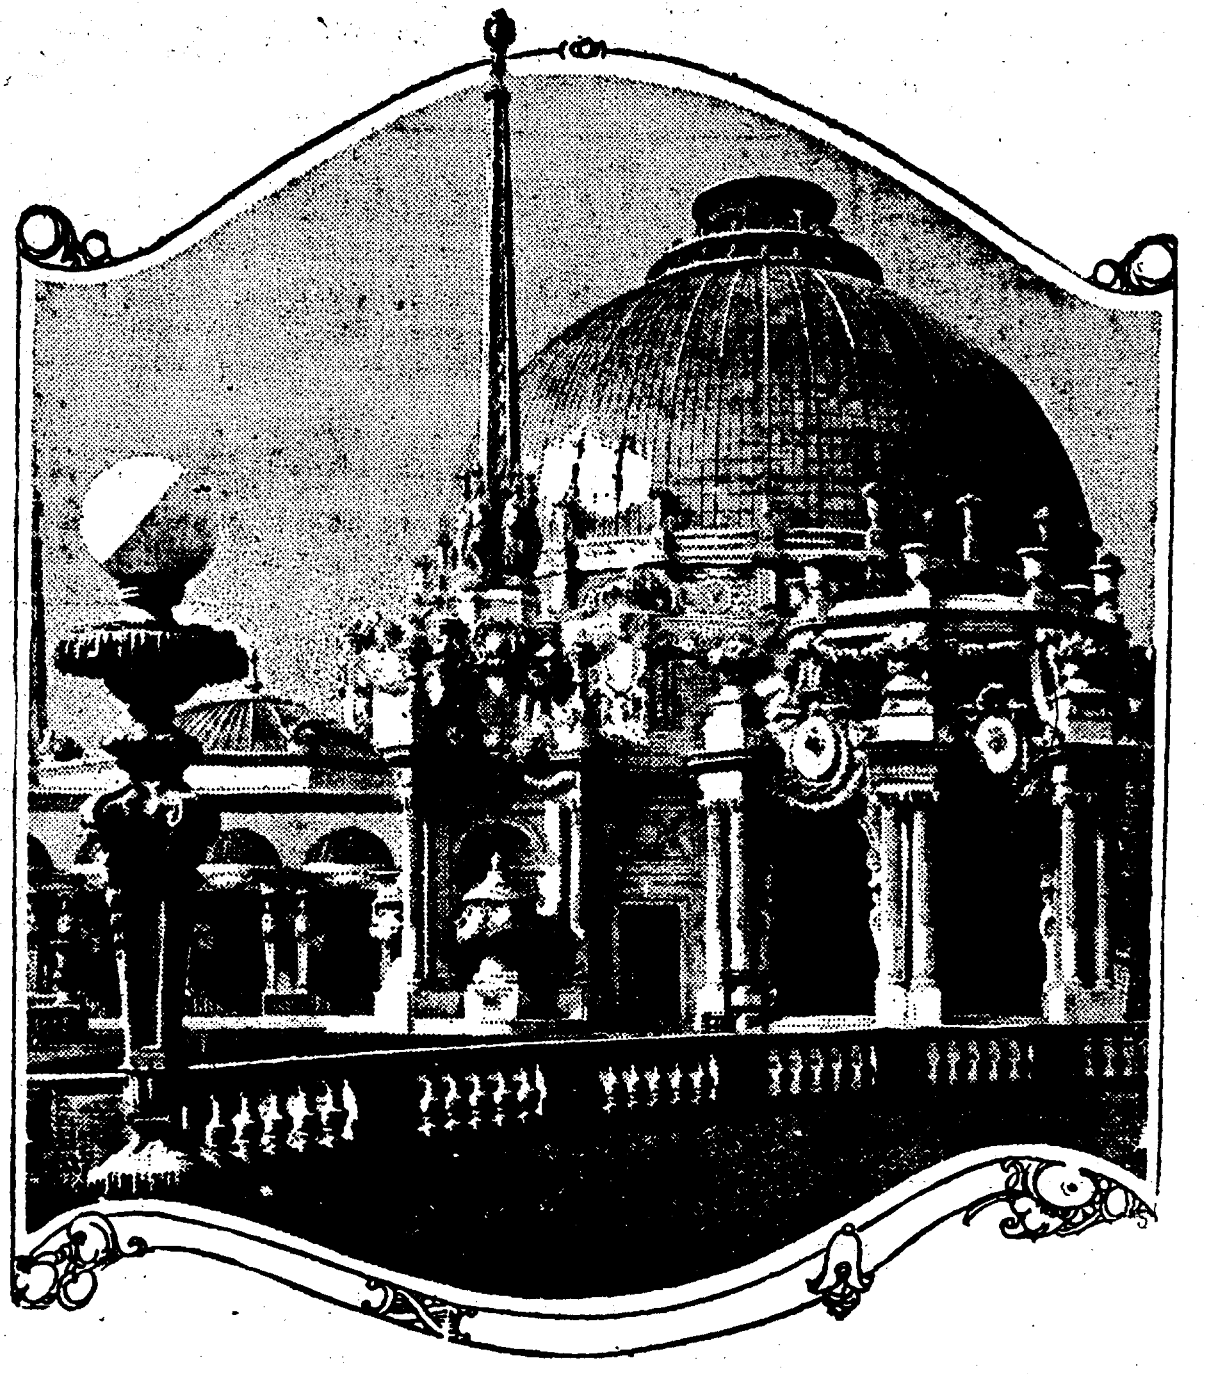
SEEING A $50,000,000 FAIR FOR $3 A DAY.



The magnificent palace of horticulture, one of the crowning architectural beauties of the Panama-Pacific fair, surpassed only by the beauties of the plants and flowers it shelters.

That's what the Panama-Pacific exposition, opening here on February 20, 1915, has kept constantly in mind. Hotels, restaurants, railway and steamship companies have co-operated in the same spirit.

This $50,000,000 exposition can be fully enjoyed at a minimum of $21 a week, or $3 a day, after the visitor has reached San Francisco. This schedule has been worked out by the exposition people with the following items:

Meals, per day, $1; lodging, per night, 50 cents; admission to grounds, 50 cents; amusements, etc., $1.00; total, per day, $3.

Reduced transcontinental rates on all railway lines will prevail during the entire exposition period, with inter-routing arrangements.

Sample rates from Mississippi river points are $57.50 for the round trip, with stop-overs; from Rocky mountain points, $45; Omaha, Kansas City and points in that zone, $50.

Opportunity to see the wonder spots of the United States has never before been so conveniently linked up with a great national event.

Any one of the half dozen railway lines which traverse the continent will carry the exposition visitor to regions of grandeur outranking the show places of Europe.

Prairie lands still dotted with buffalo wallows and ranged by great bands of cattle, cowboy tended; Colorado's titanic canyons and peaks; Yellowstone park; the Grand canyon in Arizona; the painted deserts of New Mexico, home of the Navajos and Zuni Indians; the great Salt Lake; Glacier national park in Montana; the orange groves of southern California, and Lake Tahoe and the redwood forests in the north—these are but a few of the hints in an itinery of "seeing America first" in connection with the 1915 fair.

The Panama-Pacific tourist will march with history—the conquest of a continent—on his swift westward way. And at the end of the trail here he will find all the sweat and romance that went into the winning of the west displayed and symbolized in a fair that marks the opening of the new commercial trail into the Orient.

Summed up, the Panama-Pacific exposition in the splendor of its palaces and gardens, the character of its myriad displays, the urge toward a broader and better and more efficient national life, its colorful pageantry, its congresses and sports events, stands as a great public university for the people of the United States during 1915.

LANE WILL BE GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Not Believed He Has Handed in Formal Resignation as Reported.

"If Prof. Charles R. Lane has handed his resignation in, I know nothing of it and am inclined to doubt it," declared E. W. Cook, a member of the school board Monday morning.

Some days ago Prof. Lane called upon Superintendent J. N. Study, it is understood, and told him that he did not seem to improve. Superintendent Study consulted with members of the school board and that seems to be about all there is to the resignation story. Probably some action will be taken at the meeting of the school board Monday evening. It is believed Prof. Lane will be given a leave of absence on full salary.

Prof. Lane has served as principal of the Fort Wayne high school for nearly forty years. For some time he has been in poor health and previous to the holidays spent several weeks in a sanitarium. Since his return he has shown little improvement.

NEEDED CONFIDENCE MUCH MORE THAN CASH

(By Gilson Gardner.)

Washington, Feb. 8.—The cotton pool, like the gold exchange pool, has lapsed without being used. It was a psychological remedy for a psychological complaint in the economic system, so the administration claims. The banks subscribed $135,000,000, to help carry the cotton crop. The southern banks, however, took less than one million of this money, although the rate was reduced subsequently to five per cent. Now steps are being taken to dissolve the pool. As soon as it was apparent that $135,000,000 would be available for loaning on cotton, the southern banks did not want the money. They loaned their own money. It was not the money that was needed but the confidence and willingness to lend money. The formation of the pool supplied the confidence and the money was loaned.

There is some bitterness expressed by the southern growers over the delay in the formation of the pool, and the consequent loss to them while the price of cotton was so greatly depressed. It is claimed that had the $135,000,000 been more promptly subscribed and been made accessible to the actual grower of cotton, the latter would have been saved from heavy losses and increased mortgages. The grower accuses the middleman and incidentally the banker of profiting at his expense. It is impossible to say to what extent this has happened. The bankers claim that the opening of the cotton exchange was the step which saved the situation and sent cotton from an almost minus quantity to 8 cents a pound, which is enough to cover the cost of growing and selling. As soon as the exchange was opened the market began to recover and these operations coupled with the fact that the foreign demand even in Germany began to make itself felt, relieved the situation so that now money is easier and the general business situation in the south is reported to be much improved.

The gold pool worked out in much the same way; $100,000,000 was subscribed and none of it was used. The existence of the pool restored confidence and credit took place of gold.

The Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency issued to relieve the strain produced by the war has been going back to the Treasury quite rapidly. The total amount issued was $384,485,000. This has been reduced to approximately $100,000,000.

In 154 cities of the central states building permits issued in 1914 amounted to 771,017,852 as against 838,945,302 for the same cities in 1913, a falling off of eight percent.

According to the Federal Reserve board, the indebtedness of the United States to Europe on the first of September in debts maturing within thirty days was approximately $500,000,000. This indebtness has been paid and a balance of trade established over foreign exports which for December was $131,000,000. Now it is reported that England proposes to float part of its war loan in the United States.

The largest mail order house in the United States has just cut a melon amounting to $20,000,000. These accumulated profits, which are not by any means all the profits, were distributed in stock to the stockholders. Representative Stevens of New Hampshire, author of the "fair trade" bill, calls attention to this fact as an argument in favor of standardizing trade articles. It is claimed that many articles sold by mail order houses are not what they are represented to be and that their competition is not fair competition because there are no standards to which their advertising must conform.

Here is a new angle on the ship purchase bill. England, it seems, has suddenly taken an interest, not against the bill, but in favor of it. The reason is interesting. It seems that in case Germany should succeed in blocking by submarines the British Isles, and cutting off, as is threatened, the British supply of food, England would like to have a lot of grain ships carrying the United States flag and United States government owned, to perform the neutral function of carrying food to them. The pro-Germans in Washington who are becoming quite active, do not conceal their pleasure in the Democratic revolt headed by O'Gorman and Clark of Arkansas, against the ship purchase bill. O'Gorman is one of our Gaelics who are not pro-Allies, and the shipping fight has thus been complicated by war sympathies.

Each year the import of opium from India into China is reduced by 5,100 chests.

YES, WE HAVE THAT ONE, BUT HERE'S ONE THAT WE SELL MORE OF. INSTEAD OF SPENDING THEIR MONEY FOR ADVERTISING, THEY PUT MORE VALUE INTO THE ARTICLE, AND —

More Nourishment—

—in a package of Grape-Nuts than in a roast of beef.

Grape-Nuts is meat—the meat of wheat and barley—a rich, sweet, appetizing food, ready to eat direct from the package with cream or milk.

All the bone-making, blood-making, muscle-making values of choicest wheat combined with malted barley are afforded in this famous pure food.

Grape-Nuts being partially pre-digested by long baking, gives quickly a wonderful power to "do," in return for the small energy required to digest it. Better and more complete nourishment than Grape-Nuts and cream is difficult to find; and with the price of meat way up there's true economy, too.

"There's a Reason" For GRAPE-NUTS

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

Huntington, Ind., Feb. 8.—Mrs. Ray Dillon, aged 35, of near Majenica, who cut her throat with a razor Saturday while mentally unbalanced, told her physician yesterday afternoon that she wants to get well. The shock of the self-inflicted wound and loss of blood cleared her mind and she said that life seems normal to her for the first time since a nervous breakdown five months ago.

Wether the return of reason will be only temporary the doctors could not tell. They regard it as a favorable sign and think it will greatly improve her chances of getting well. After her mind cleared she called her four children, all boys, to her bedside. Calling each one by name she said they again looked as they had before her mind was deranged.

The oldest boy is eight and the youngest only a few months of age.

ILLEGAL SALES STOPPED.

Alleged Liquor Law Violations in Muncie Are Curbed.

Muncie, Ind., Feb. 8.—A canvass of a number of places suspected of being "blind tigers" revealed the fact that many of the proprietors were out of the city.

The places where liquor is said to have been sold illegally and openly for several months are still in operation, however, but it is believed that some of these places are now what they seem—cigar stores or restaurants.

The grand jury, which recently returned 112 indictments, virtually all of which were for alleged violations of the liquor laws, is in temporary adjournment, but will reconvene to continue its investigation February 23.

SHOT BY HIS BROTHER

Syracuse, Ind., Feb. 8.—Truman Long, the 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Long, who reside north and west of Syracuse, is lying in Goshen hospital, the result of a rifle ball wound received while hunting on his father's farm. The victim, in company with his younger brother, Lael, aged 8 years, was engaged in hunting a skunk. One had been shot by the elder of the boys and while he was examining the animal his brother took the rifle and aiming at the dead body of the skunk, said: "I'm going to shoot a skunk, too." He pulled the trigger, the bullet entering the thigh of the older boy.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Adv.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers. —Adv.

An explosion of a reel of films caused a panic about 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the Hippodrome motion picture theatre at 112 West Main street, but fortunately no one was injured. Edward Erickson, the operator, says that a small flame used in patching films ignited the film he was handling. Soon the film was a mass of flames which shot out from the operator's booth into the theatre. Flames bursting from the front window of the booth also caught fire to a large awning. The fire department had little trouble in extinguishing the blaze, the damage being confined to the booth with its contents and to the awning. The theatre is owned by O. E. Wobrock.

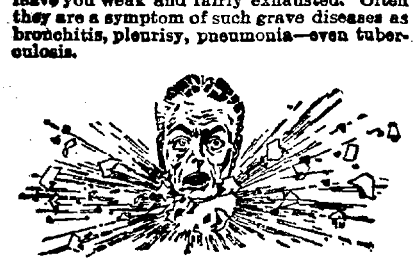
Explosive Coughs Fairly Rack You to Pieces

Foley's Honey and Tar is Just Like Oil on Troubled Waters for those Violent Racking Coughs.

They rasp and strain your throat, tear at your chest and lungs, congest the blood in your neck and head, almost strangle you, leave you weak and fairly exhausted. Often they are a symptom of such grave diseases as bronchitis, pleurisy, pneumonia—even tuberculosis.



"Oh, for a bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY and TAR to stop this awful coughing."

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND spreads a healing, soothing coating as it glides down the raw inflamed throat. It loosens the cough, brings the phlegm up easily. Takes away that tight feeling across the chest, and eases stuffy, wheezy breathing and hoarseness.

A dealer of Toledo, Ohio, (name furnished) who has sold FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR for years, writes: "One of my customers came into store to use long distance telephone. He was coughing so violently that he could not talk. I sat him down and gave him a bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR, and in 10 minutes he had recovered. He had been unable to work for three months, due to this cough. He says FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR relieved him entirely of this trouble."

S. MARTIN, Bassett, Nebr., writes: "I had a severe cough and cold and was almost past going. I got a bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR and used it frequently, when having violent coughing spells, and am glad to say it cured my cough entirely and my cold soon disappeared."

KEPT PET BULLDOG IN BOMB-PROOF CELLAR

Mrs. Dugan Was in Fear for "Honey Boy" During Warsaw Siege.

San Francisco, Feb. 5.—So worried was Mrs. E. J. Dugan, wife of the famous jockey, that her pet bulldog "Honey Boy," would be killed by bombs in Warsaw, where she and her husband were enveloped by the Russo-German siege operations, that she had a special bombproof cellar constructed for him. "Honey Boy" is valued at $1,000.

E. J. Dugan, Mrs. Dugan and "Honey Boy."

Mr. and Mrs. Dugan and their pugnosed companion have just returned here from the war zone, via the Orient.

"I was worried nearly to death over 'Honey Boy,'" said the wife of the jockey whose earnings were over $50,000 a year. "We kept him locked up in that bombproof cellar nearly all the time, and I often stayed down there with him just to keep him company."

Dugan was riding for Duke Michael Lazareff in Warsaw at the outbreak of the war.

"Zeppelins were constantly hovering over the city," said Mrs. Dugan, describing their experiences during the seige. "One of the bombs struck Duke Lazareff's stables and killed most of his horses. During the German attack the wounded were brought into the city by hundreds—almost as fast as they went out to the fighting line."

In leaving the Dugans were compelled to walk most of the way from Warsaw to Moscow, tramping through snow drifts most of the way with nothing to eat.

I have always given it to my children when suffering from croup, and it has never failed to give them prompt relief." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

RUSSIA NEEDS COTTON.

Will Absorb Large Quantities When Shipping Improves.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Russia will absorb large quantities of American cotton as soon as there are facilities for shipping it from the south to that country, American Consul General Snodgrass, at Moscow, reports. Russian dealers have been endeavoring, with poor results, to obtain a cotton supply from England, but no goods are accepted via Archangel, and railroad lines from Sweden to Russia are badly congested. The consul says the Russian crop for 1914-1915 amounts to 1,320,000 bales. Practically no American cotton is now going forward to Russia, he says.

No more cotton should be shipped to Goteborg, Sweden, at present, according to Commercial Attache Thompson, at Rotterdam, because of congestion at that port. He states there is no difficulty in shipping through Rotterdam to Germany.

American exporters, Mr. Thompson says, may possibly find a splendid opportunity in Holland for linseed oil, as it now is receiving considerable attention there.

SEEK LICENSE REVOCATIONS.

South Bend Ministers Are Active Against Saloonkeepers.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 8.—A request of Fred W. Keller, mayor, to revoke thirty-five or forty more saloon licenses in this city, as a result of disclosures brought out in recent investigations, has been made by the South Bend Ministerial association and the Law and Order league. The names of the saloonkeepers have been turned over to the mayor, and some action will be taken on the matter within the next few days. Charges of being unfit morally to conduct such establishments and failure to obey law have been placed against the saloon men.

The names of the accused dealers have not been made public, but it is known that the list contains the owners of many of the principal liquor establishments of the city.

RESCUED AFTER 25 DAYS

Victims of Earthquake Long Imprisoned in Debris at Patermo.

Rome, Feb. 8 (12 a. m.).—Red Cross workers in the earthquake ruins at Patermo yesterday heard faint moans and on delving into the debris excavated a man named Cairolo, who had been imprisoned there for twenty-five days. The man, who is 33 years old, had had nothing but some water during this time. He was uninjured and when taken in an automobile to the nearest town was able to alight from the machine without assistance.

48-HOUR LIMIT FOR HOLDING OF CATTLE

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Union stock yards, which have been under partial quarantine since January 29 because of a threatened outbreak of foot and mouth disease, were reopened today for the interstate shipment of cattle. No cattle, however, may be held for more than forty-eight hours. Government inspectors have been authorized to slaughter cattle held in violation of this order. Squads of men are still applying disinfectants to the miles of pens and alleys in the yards. It was said that the work of disinfecting the entire plant would require at least a week.

Orders have been piling up so rapidly since the inspection of the yards that the next three weeks, it was said, will be the busiest in the history of the packing houses.

SEEK CRAFT FLYING STARS AND STRIPES

New York, Feb. 8.—Curtailment of the European trade with South America because of war and a shortage of steamships has brought about a demand for sailing vessels of American registry and every ship, bark and schooner flying the American flag is being eagerly sought to carry cargoes between New York and Brazil and the Argentine.

For the first time in twenty years schooners and ships engaged in the coal and lumber trade in the coastwise traffic have been chartered as carriers in the South American trade. More than a dozen of these vessels are now loading at local piers with cargo for South America.

TWO ARE INJURED.

Icy Condition of Pavements Results in Accidents.

As a result of the icy condition of the pavements Saturday evening two persons slipped and fell, sustaining painful injuries. Mrs. Charles Denzer, 2612 Hanna street, a daughter of Detective Sergeant Charles Spillner, of the police department, fell in front of the Meyer Bros., drug store at Calhoun and Columbia streets about 10 o'clock Saturday evening, fracturing her right ankle. She was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

John Fraelich, 341 East Main street, fell at the city hall corner at Barr and Berry streets about 1 o'clock Sunday morning, fracturing his left leg above the knee. He also was taken to the St. Joseph hospital.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Adv.

It is quite a surprise, having seen and laughed at Coddles, the patient, pursuing Coddles, in "A Pair of Sixes," whose unreciprocated affection for the masquerading butler in this new and joyous farce is one of the striking farcical features, to find that in real life she is a very charming young lady and the exact antithesis of her stage character.

During the long run of "A Pair of Sixes" at the Longacre Theatre, New York it aroused general comment that while "Coddles" in her "working hours" during the time she was on the stage and most before the eyes of the public was a slavey and one of the most woe-begone creatures of the modern stage, when she passed out of the stage door and took up her real life apparently had given more care to her costuming than any other woman player on Broadway.

It is told that the quaint drawing of the character has been such that the player naturally feels that she must take more than the usual feminine care of her appearance when she is off the boards to offset the painfully unattractive appearance of "Coddles."

As soon as the interviewer settles down for a talk with Coddles it is discovered she has a grievance. She voices it immediately. The grievance is a very human one, and she is commiserated for it at once for it might affect anyone and particularly an actress to whom the remembrance of the public is a cherished thing. It is that notwithstanding all the study she has given in years gone by, and all the roles in which she has been well received by the public for years that she has been featured since her debut on Broadway in "A Pair of Sikes," as having but one claim on the public mind, and that is her ability to hit the back of her head on the unfeeling boards of the stage, upper left center and the audience's bump of humor at one and the same time.

She goes to a nearby receptacle and extracts a clipping from her home paper, one of the New York correspondent's letters which is headlined "Stage Flop Makes an Actress," and ignoring her obvious claims to praise on account of the clever piece of character work which she has given, harps throughout the article on the one note of that wonderful fall, which she describes as a stage trick, quite popular in the days when, if an actor could not gain the applause of the public in any other way, he could always take a tumble and so make a ten strike.

This clipping has been followed by expostulatory letters from her family and friends, who have been shocked at the idea of her turning handsprings or something of the sort, which is the character you would assign to her after reading this and a lot of other criticism, so-called.

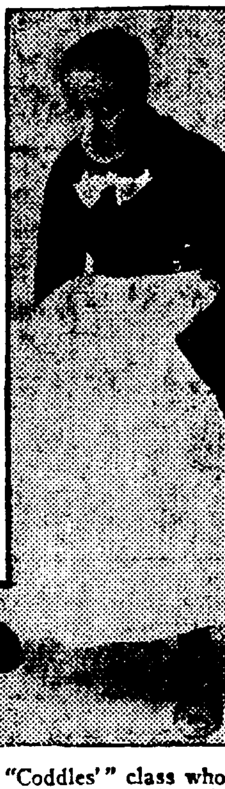
Edward Peple, the playwright, stated that "Coddles" had made more of the part than he had put into it, a not uncommon surprise to many playwrights, one would judge, but when you come to talk it over you discover that her personal translation of it has been more along the physical than the psychological lines. For in answer to the question as to whether she thinks, in these enlightened days, there are women even in "Coddles'" class who worship so unreservedly and with such scant returns, "Coddles" looks slightly perplexed, as if she had not given that part of the subject much thought, and then digs from the inner recesses of her mind a single instance of a middle-aged woman who was so in love with a man that she hounded him with presents and attentions. The man was an actor and of course cannot be judged by ordinary standards, being so far above the commonplace man in attractions; so poor "Coddles" is still left unexplained, psychologically.



But from the other angle, "Coddles" talks unreservedly. Her turn for dialects, if not the absolute reason for her success in character work, has helped immeasurably. To the Canadian home came all sorts and kinds of "help," immigrants from Yorkshire, Lancashire, Scotch and Irish girls newly landed and preserving intact all the peculiarities of their native tongue. The family circle also numbered some friends from the old country whose brogue was captivating enough to emulate.

"Coddles" and her sister soon became adept in imitations, and though the Cockney talk of "Coddles" would seem to have reached the top note of perfection, she says that her Irish brogue is her particular pride, while her sister could always beat her far and away when they came to discourse in Scotch.

"I have always associated the tightly coiled hair, the wasp-like waist, the narrow shoulders with a woman of the 'Coddles' type whom we had work for us," she explains in answer to the interrogation concerning make-up and costumes, "and determined that if I ever had an opportunity to duplicate her Sunday best I would do so. I have studied rigidly the dress of every character I had to represent, because I believe in the slightest details of the clothes the temperment is shown just as distinctly as in the gestures, intonations and silence."

It is a pity that some of the young American actresses could not take a leaf out of "Coddles'" book and achieve a real success by subordinating their physical attractions for a few years to the arduous work demanded by character parts which is, according to authorities, the only way of obtaining something besides a Paquin popularity.

ANGRY WOMEN STORM GATES OF FACTORIES

Roosevelt, N. J., Feb. 8.—A crowd of angry women stormed the gates of the Liebeg, Williams & Clark fertilizer plants here today where nineteen strikers were shot by deputies January 19, and administered a thorough beating to Elmer Osborne, chief engineer at the Liebeg works, and Frank Davis, a clerk at the Williams & Clark plant. Both men were rescued by special policemen, sworn in yesterday.

The trouble started when some of the men attempted to go to work for $1.60 a day. This was the wage they received at the time of the strike, the previous wage having been $2 a day. The women jeered and hooted the men going to work this morning, and when Osborne and Davis appeared attacked them. One man among the crowd of women was arrested.

The companies operating the plants issued a notice yesterday to the effect that unless the men returned to work today they would be discharged. Strike leaders said none of the strikers were among the men who went to work today.

TWO MORE MAY HAVE BEEN BURIED ALIVE

Yonkers, N. Y., Feb. 8.—To the story that eight feeble inmates of the German Odd Fellows' home here had been put to death because they were aged and required much attention, was added today the suggestion that two other inmates might have been buried alive while still under the influence of an anesthetic. It was believed at least two of the bodies would be exhumed.

The coroner today began an investigation of this suggestion. There was little tangible for him to work on except reports founded on the fears of the present inmates, with whom he held a long talk yesterday. The New York undertakers who took charge of the bodies were to be questioned as to what steps they had taken to make sure that life was extinct before burial.

The deceased was born in Berne and is survived by his widow and one son, Roland. Funeral services and burial will take place in San Francisco.

Mrs. Charles Geddis was operated on at the Lutheran hospital Saturday for appendicitis. She is getting along nicely.

LONG BATTLE LINE IN EAST UNBROKEN

London, Feb. 8.—(12 noon.)—The news of the arrival at Liverpool, under the American flag of the Cunard line steamer, Lusitania, is given much space in the English papers today. The information was received too late to permit of much editorial comment as yet, but enough has been printed to show that the incident is regarded as one of great importance. It is not generally expected, however, that the British government will take further action unless Washington requests an explanation.

In the realm of military interest all eyes today are turned toward the eastern battle front. Here the tremendous efforts of both sides have not as yet produced any results worthy to be called decisive. The Russian forces, which have been giving ground before the fierce attacks of the reinforcements of the Austro-German army in the Carpathian passes, apparently have checked the onward rush of the defenders of Hungary, but in Poland, in front of Warsaw, the opponents appear still to be hammering each other's lines with a fierceness which recalls today the first German invasion of Poland.

In spite of the desperate nature of the fighting in front of Warsaw, it is generally believed in England that the most critical action is developing in the Carpathians, where the reported Russian reverse will compromise the new campaign opening against Hungary.

Except for several minor attacks of the Germans on Nieuport, the western line of battle evidently has enjoyed a quiet week end. Air and sea operations also have been suspended during the past few days, London not even being thrilled by the usual Sunday rumors that Zeppelins were on their way to the British capital. Also there has been complete absence of any naval news.

ORDERS FROM ADMIRALTY.

British Directed Use of Stars and Stripes by Lusitania.

London, Feb. 8.—(3:00 a. m.)—It was upon orders of the British admiralty that the Cunard steamship Lusitania raised the American flag while crossing the Irish sea, according to a dispatch from Liverpool to the Daily Chronicle.

"When the Lusitania was off the coast of Ireland on Saturday morning," says the dispatch, a wireless message was received from the admiralty ordering the captain to hoist the American flag and sail under it to Liverpool. This was done."

The captain of the Lusitamia was quoted as saying on his arrival at Liverpool that he had a right to fly the American flag, as there were neutral passengers and a neutral cargo on board, but made no reference to any orders.

While no official confirmation of the Liverpool report was given out today the foreign office gave out a statement last night, in which the use of a neutral flag was justified.

TRAIN BANDITS ROB MEN; WOMEN ESCAPE

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8.—The Palm Beach limited train of the Florida East Coast railroad, bound from Jacksonville to Miami, was boarded by four masked men at Stuart, Fla., early last night and male passengers on the observation platform robbed of money and jewelry.

No attempt was made to molest women passengers. They were forced, however, to enter the car. After completing their search of the men, the robbers made their way through the car where they found that a brakeman had locked the front door. Revolvers were turned on the brakeman and he was ordered to pull the bell cord to stop the train. When it slowed down the bandits jumped to the ground and escaped. It was not known how much money and jewelry the robbers obtained, but it was not believed the amount was large. Posses are searching for the men.

SIX-CENT BREAD IS ALMOST CERTAINTY

With little hope of any great reduction in wheat the price of bread will doubtless have to be increased to six cents a loaf, in the opinion of George M. Haffner, who returned Saturday afternoon from Washington, D. C., where he called upon the chamber of commerce as national councilor representing the National Association of Master Bakers, and also as a delegate from the Fort Wayne Commercial club. Theodore Thieme, national councilor for the Commercial club, who also attended the meeting, went on to New York city, where he will spend a few days before returning to this city.

Mr. Haffner says that the bakers have five delegates at Washington. A resolution asking congress to curb, if possible, the rising price of wheat and flour was presented, but was evidently killed, inasmuch as the embargo would not prevent the advance of wheat for the reason that foreign representatives can buy futures from the board of trade. This does not stop the shortage, over which the bakers have absolutely no control. In the opinion of Mr. Haffner six-cent bread is inevitable.

RUSH TO RUM JOINT OVER MEXICAN LINE

Naco, Arizona, Feb. 8.—One saloon opened for business in Naco, Sonora, yesterday within the toss of a bottle from the site of the principal bar room here which was closed when Arizona went dry on New Year's day.

All the main highways from near-by Arizona towns were heavily traveled yesterday and the Mexicans were far outnumbered in their own town by visiting Americans.

A street car conductor from Bisbee was arrested while bringing liquor across the line, after a free for all fight. Furniture was wrecked in the customs house office, where the trouble occurred.

VETERAN HIKER SETS WALKING RECORD AT 60

William Greer Harrison at Head of the Oldest Athletic Club.

San Francisco. Feb. 8.—The athletic career of William Greer Harrison, seventy-nine-year-old amateur sportsman, may be said to cover three score years and ten for the veteran athlete has been interested in sports ever since he was six years old.

"As a boy I was president of an athletic club," said Harrison. And as a man it was as president of an athletic club that Harrison gained the most fame. His career as president of the Olympic club of this city, the oldest athletic club in the world, is one of which any sportsman might be proud.

For twenty years William Greer Harrison headed the Olympic club and it was due to his efforts that the institution took its place at the head of athletic organizations. He financed a water company for the sole purpose of assuring the club a permanent supply of salt water for its plunge.

Although Harrison grew up to be a capable boxer, fencer and wrestler, he achieved greatest fame as a walker. And the ability of walking is still with him. On New Year's day, 1915, the veteran hiked eight miles across the city with the Olympic club on its annual outing to the beach and took a plunge in the icy surf along with all the other club members. On his sixtieth birthday Harrison walked sixty-one miles in fifteen hours, thereby establishing a walking record.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Wheat prices took an upward turn today, nfluenced to some extent by Liverpool dispatches telling of fear as to a shortage of supplies in Great Britain and France. After opening ⅝c off to ¼c up, quotations scored a material all around advance.

The close was unsettled at ⅛c to ⅜c net lower.

Corn reflected the action of wheat. Commission houses did most of the buying, pit speculators the bulk of the selling. The opening, which varied from a shade decline to ½c gain, was followed by a moderate general advance.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Feb. 8.—The foreign situation again was the cause of some irregularity in today's early stock market, leading shares showing variable changes. The feature was Bethlehem Steel, which rose 2 points to a new high record. Railroad issues declined to a lower level, but soon recovered, Southern Pacific moving up a point. Interest attached to the movement of Canadian Pacific, which rose over a point in London, in anticipation [illegible] entire list was firm under lead of Reading and United States Steel.

Short selling unsettled the list soon after the early rise but stocks were freely taken on the decline. Canadian Pacific sold higher than before and Bethlehem Steel increased its gain to 3 points. Other leaders reflected bearish aggression, however, Union Pacific and Reading unevenly. Various specials were put forward for substantial gains. Some equipment shares were heavy American Locomotive being at its new minimum of 38. Seaboard Air Line also fell 2¼ to its fixed price of 36. Bonds were firm, some minor issues gaining over 2 points.

Reading declined again in the late trading, the entire list re-acting with some recovery in the final dealings. The closing was firm.

PROTEST THE EXPORT OF ANY WAR MATERIAL

Emmaus Congregation Asks Mr. Cline to Support the Passage of Bill.

At the regular meeting held Sunday afternoon the members of the Emmaus Lutheran congregation passed a resolution to petition the representatives and the senators of the state to use their influence in behalf of and vote for the passage of the bill now before congress forbidding all and every export of war material to beligerent countries.

A letter was drawn up by members which will be sent to Congressman Cyrus Cline, which reads as follows:

Dear Sir: In their regular meeting, held Feb. 7, the Emmaus Lutheran congregation of Fort Wayne, including about 500 voting citizens, have adopted the following resolutions, which they respectfully submit to your consideration:

Whereas, the dreadful war between European nations causes untold suffering and unlimited loss, not only to beligerent, but to neutral countries of the world.

Whereas, furthermore, it is the desire of every fair-minded citizen of our country that peace be established and the war ended as soon as possible.

Whereas, furthermore, the highest official of the United States, the president, has requested all God-fearing citizens of our country to pray for peace between the waring nations.

Whereas, furthermore, this congregation has complied with this request of the president of the United States and every Sunday does pray unto God for peace.

Whereas, finally, the practice of sending arms, amunition and war materials to beligerent countries is directly contrary to the spirit which prompted our government to request our citizens to pray for peace.

Be it therefore resolved, that we protest against all and every export of arms, amunition and war materials to beligerent countries.

Furthermore, that we as Americans, respectfully call your attention to house resolution H. J., 337.

Furthermore, that we ask you to work actively and to vote so as to make this bill a law during this session of congress.

CRUEL DRIVER GETS LENIENT TREATMENT

Louis Heidenbrink Allows His Team to Stand Out Unprotected.

Louis Heidenbrink pleaded guilty in the city court Monday morning, to a charge of cruelty to animals and declined to offer any defense until Acting Prosecutor Frank M. Hogan and Judge Kerr insisted that he take the stand and answer some questions. Night Patrolman Coulter testified that on the night of January 30, during a furious snowstorm, Heidenbrink's team had stood for seven hours on the street uncovered and facing the blizzard. On two previous occasions shortly before Heidenbrink had left them unblanketed, once for five hours and another time for almost four. He was enjoying the warmth of a saloon while his helpless beasts were buffeted by the wintry blasts. He was let off with great leniency for the court assessed a fine of but $1 and costs.

Is Charged With Burglary.

Merle Stritmatter had some difficulty entering a satisfactory plea to a charge of burglary for having broken into the poolroom and sigar store operated by James Selby in the Randall hotel building and his case was continued until Tuesday morning with his bond fixed at $1,000. He had been employed at the place, was discharged February 1 and early on the morning of February 3 forcibly entered the place through the basement of the hotel, removing the covering of a window to do so. Selby missed some cigars, cigarettes and candy. Stritmatter says he went into the place to sleep, but left at once because noise in the hotel lobby adjoining prevented peaceable slumber. He strenuously denies taking anything and none of the stolen property has been found. He is a brother of Pearl Stritmatter, who has repeatedly been arrested for stealing.

Other City Court Cases.

The charge of assault and battery against Albert Hoover, an 18-year-old lad who is accused of attempting shocking crimes upon Louisa Pontello and other little Italian girls, was continued until Tuesday morning and his bond was fixed at $1,000. The police expect to make other arrests in this case. Hoover has been fully identified by several of the little girls.

Jim McGuire, a one-legged shoestring peddler, was fined $5 and costs on a drunk charge. He had been out of jail but a day when he was arrested.

Martin Reagan, another peddler who got drunk, was fined $5 and costs and went over.

Joe Boski, a Pole, was drunk on borrowed money and made trouble when Officer Patte arrested him. He drew $1 and costs.

Mick Frank, who had been lodging for a week in the "bum room" at police headquarters, went there drunk Saturday night and started a row. He beat himself up with his own fists and had a face to show for it. He went over for eleven days.

George Kane, who says he is employed as a window trimmer for a down town store would not get out of a restaurant, where he has made a practice of loafing after the saloons close at midnight, and was sent in and charged with loitering by Officer Coulter. His case was continued a week and he was allowed to go.

NOTES OF THE POLICE.

Max J. Blitz, 820 West Wayne street, telephoned the police Saturday night that there was somebody in front of his residence yelling "murder." The wagon with officers made a run, but could find no bloody footprints or other evidences of crime and no author of the alarm.

Chief of Police Charles Lenz is confined to his home with an attack of grip and has been off duty since Saturday.

Detective Sergeant Joseph Brennan, finger print expert in the police department, pronounces the burglary of the M. J. Clear photograph studio, on the second floor at 706½ Calhoun street, the work of small boys. Finger prints on the dust of the transom through which entrance was gained show this. Fifty pennies and a spurious half-dollar were stolen.

Desk Sergeant Charles Nave has just completed ten years in the police service. He was a patrolman five and one-half years, served as a bicycle officer six months, was bailiff in the city court over three years and has been a sergeant since January, 1914. Recently he was made night desk sergeant to succeed Harry Grimme, who was promoted to lieutenant.

MARCH OUT AS FIRE MENACES

"Get on your wraps and take your books out; school will be dismissed for today and don't loiter," said Miss Alma Kariger, teacher in school No. 5, in Washington township, commonly known as the Scarlet school, located on the Goshen road, at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning, and when the twenty-eight pupils got outside they found the structure in flames and in half an hour it had been gutted by fire.

James Young, a director in the school district, discovered the blaze while he was working about his home a short distance away, and ran to the building. The teacher knew nothing of it until Mr Young quietly called her to the door and imparted the information.

She did not become excited and succeeded in marching the children out without accident. They have no fire drill in the school and, while there probably would have been little danger, as there is but one room and the building was only a story high, the teacher and the director displayed great presence of mind in taking no chances.

Nothing to Fight Flames With.

A big crowd responded to the alarm, but there was no effective means of fighting the fire, although the teacher's desk, the piano and some pictures were gotten out. One pupil lost his books in the blaze. Water carried from a nearby farm house in pails failed to conquer the blaze.

The four walls were left standing and seemed in fair condition, but when the school is rebuilt it will be made modern and probably these walls will be razed. In the meantime the school will be conducted in the church, half a mile west.

No attempt was made to get the fire department from Fort Wayne, as there was not water enough available to have done any good and the fire burned too rapidly to have been extinguished by the auto chemical.

First Thought of Pupils.

Mr. Young did not give an alarm. His first thought was of the pupils. The blaze started at the base of the chimney on the north end of the school and was eating its way slowly down toward the leaves when it was first seen.

COURT AUTHORIZES $1,500,000 ISSUE

Receiver's Certificates to Carry Fordward Rumely Concern.

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—To continue the operation of the M. Rumely company, the $30,000,000 agricultural machinery manufacturing concern for which Finley P. Mount, of this city, was appointed receiver on January 19, the receiver's certificates to the total of $1,500,000 were authorized in the United States district court here today. Mr. Mount was authorized to offer $550,000 worth of the certificates for immediate sale.

The plan to continue the plant which has branch offices in all sections of the country, was reached at conferences between Mr. Mount and the creditors, held in New York last week.

Counsel for the creditors here today in connection with the order for the receiver's certificates says the plans of Mr. Mount had the approval of the creditors and that the outlook was bright for the concern.

ASKS $500,000 FOR CHICAGO UNEMPLOYED

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Solicitation of the $500,000 fund to provide work for Chicago's unemployedbegan today under direction of Prof. Charles Henderson, of the University of Chicago, chairman of the municipal industrial commission. The fund is being raised as the result of an appeal made by Mayor Harrison to citizens on Saturday. It is the object of the commission to insist upon a year's residence in Chicago as a qualification for work.

The work created by the fund will be used to beautify the city. Cleaning unsightly spots and street work of all kinds, for which public funds do not provide, will be started immediately according to the plans.

STEAMER DACIA IS NOW READY TO SAIL

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8.—The steamer Dacia was all ready today to start on her long heralded voyage to Rotterdam with cotton from Galveston for Bremen. Captain McDonald took out his clearance papers early today and said he would sail before night on the usual steamer lanes. Five members of the crew left the ship.

Great Britain has given notice she will seize the ship and pay for the cargo. The state department and the London foreign office have had exchanges on the case, which probably will be tried out in a prize court. One British cruiser has been in this vicinity for some time.

PATROLMAN SINGS DUET WITH CHOIR LEADER JONES AT TABERNACLE.

PATROLMAN FRANK H. WILMOTH.

One of the biggest hits of the present evangelistic campaign in Fort Wayne was made Sunday evening when Patrolman F. H. Wilmoth and Choir Leader Loren G. Jones sang a duet. The officer, who is one of the biggest men on the force, was in uniform, and Mr. Jones borrowed a police uniform from one of the other patrolmen on duty at the tabernacle. Before they made their appearance Mr. Upson, of the Lyon party, announced that "Patrolmen Wilmoth and Murphy" would sing a duet. Mr. Jones had mounted the platform before the audience recognized him in the uniform of a "copper."

CROOKED WORK SAYS SENATOR

Minority Leader Robinson Makes Charge on Floor of the Senate.

NOT CONSIDERED BY COMMITTEE, HE SAYS

Auburn Man Refutes Allegation of Legislative Juggling.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 8.—Charges of crooked work in reporting bills out of committee were made on the floor of the senate this morning by Minority Leader Robinson. The charges were made following the calling up of Senator Elsener's bill on second reading, which provides that a prosecutor may take a change of venue to another county in a criminal court case.

Robinson termed the bill "vicious" and moved that it should be recommitted to committee for further consideration. He declared that the bill had been reported for passage to the senate when it had never been considered by the judiciary committee, to which it was referred. He said he was the third member of the committee to arrive at the meeting last week when the bill was supposed to have been considered, Senator Clarke, chairman, and Elsener being the only members there at the time. There are eleven members of the committee.

Cashier Who Ended Life Left Note Putting Blame on Business Men.

Lebanon, Pa., Feb. 8.—A notice posted today on the doors of the First National bank of Schaefferstown, near here, announced that the institution would remain closed until after the funeral on Wednesday of Alvin Binner, the cashier who committed suicide on Saturday.

Binner left a note addressed to his wife in which he said he was "wrong in my bank accounts." The note also stated that he did not have a cent of the bank's money, but was caught by certain business men of the town.

A bank examiner has found some irregularities and it is understood these consist of overdrafts to the men mentioned by Binner in his note to his wife.

The amount of money involved is said to be more than $12,000. The directors of the bank have promised to make good. The deposits amount to about $100,000.

NEWARK TO BE GIVEN KANSAS CITY'S PLACE

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Newark probably will be given Kansas City's place in the Federal league, it was said here following the return of President Gilmore from the east today. Gilmore declined to state whether the team would be placed in New York or in the New Jersey city, but from another source came the information, according to the newspapers, that Newark is the one. Gilmore declared he already had made all arrangements for the transfer. He said that a "prominent oil man" would furnish part of the capital necessary to start the club in its new eastern location.

No other changes in the circuit will be made this year, but plans have been made to enter New York next year, according to the president. The population from which a Newark team could draw is estimated at 1,500,000, the Federal leaguers say.

ALLIES ARE DRIVEN OUT

Today's War News Given in Summary.

The German army in the Argonne has begun another of the repeated attacks which have made that section of eastern France one of the most bitterly contested battlefields of Europe. The official German statement of today announces the capture of a portion of the allies' positions in the Argonne. The French war office says that one German attack was repulsed and that the fighting is still in progress.

In northern France, near La Bassee, there was a violent artillery engagement yesterday, but along the western front as a whole it was comparatively quiet.

Slackening of the attack along the Warsaw front by the Germans and their transfer of troops to East Prussia are expected in Warsaw to lead to a general onslaught by the Russians in the endeavor to clear Poland of the invaders. A forward movement altready has been undertaken in other sections of the line near the Bzura river and is reported to have won some successes for the Russians.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—The war department this afternoon gave out an official statement which read:

"The fighting for our positions south of the canal and southwest of La Bassee continues. Part of the short trench taken by the enemy has been recaptured.

"In the Argonne we wrested from our opponents a portion of their fortified positions; otherwise there has been no change of importance in this region. On the East Prussian frontier, southeast of the plain of the lakes and in Poland, on the right bank of the Vistula there have been a few unimportant and for us successful engagements of local importance. Otherwise there is nothing to report from the east."

Hope to Drive Germans Out.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, Feb. 8.—The reaction which followed the cessation of the fierce German aggressive in the region of Humin and Berjimow and the transfer of German troops northward to initiate a new offensive in the east Prussian country which lies between Tilsit. Gumbinnen and Lipno, has provided the Russian forces in Poland, in the opinion of Russian military observers. with an opportunity for the Seven hundred and nine decisions was the record made Sunday, the biggest day of the Fort Wayne evangelistic campaign and the greatest day in the history of Dr. Lyon's career as an evangelist.

Scores of penitents filtered out from the big crowd at each service, men in all walks of life, women, young and old, marched bravely forward to start life anew. Though exhausted from one of the most strenuous days he has ever experienced, when Dr. Lyon left the tabernacle Sunday night there was a broad smile on his face and he was truly happy. He had made a new record and Fort Wayne had seen a sight never before witnessed in the religious life of the city.

The biggest demonstration came in the morning at the union Sunday school service, when 427 responded to the invitation. At the regular morning service there were twenty-nine decisions. In the afternoon meeting for men there were seventy-one decisions and at the women's meeting fifty-five. In the evening 127 took the stand for Christ.

On Saturday night—it might well have been called railroad night—seventy-nine penitents traveled down the sawdust aisles on the way to Christianity's terminal. Dr. Lyon opened wide the throttle of his piquant speech and choochooed with the gospel message straight into the hearts of the multitude, which filled the wooden shed to the doors.

Patrolman and Jones Sing.

Patrolman F. A. Wilmoth, who responded to the invitation Sunday morning, and Choir Director Loren G. Jones made the big hit Sunday evening. The officer in his blue uniform and Jones in a uniform he had borrowed from one of the other patrolmen on duty at the tabernacle, marched to the platform, amid the greatest applause that has been heard during the meetings, and sang a duet. When they started to leave there was another tremendous outburst of applause and they had to sing again. Both men were given the Chautauqua salute, the demonstration continuing for several minutes.

"I see that Jones is trying to get a job on the police force," Dr. Lyon said after the applause had subsided. "I think if I lose him I'll take Wilmoth."

Dr. Lyon delivered a convincing sermon Sunday evening on "Not Far From the kingdom." As he explained, the message was for those living fairly, honest, upright lives and yet are away from Christ.

"The kingdom of God was the central truth in the teaching of Christ." the evangelist declared. "He did not talk much about salvation, but rather about the causes that produced salvation, the results that come from citizenship in the kingdom of God."

Saved By Regeneration.

"The speaker ridiculed the idea that salvation could be secured by heredity. "You are not saved by generation, but by regeneration," he said.

"Many a man in these days wants to keep his religion like his property, in his wife's name," he continued. He said some people swell up like a poisoned pup in speaking of the religion of their forefathers. At another time he declared that many people have a narrow, shriveled, stingy, selfish idea of Christian life.

"Some folks' religion is like a man's

When the end comes go with the realization that all is well with your soul.

Jesus Christ did not talk very much about salvation, but rather about the causes that produced salvation.

Nearness to the kingdom of God without entering into the kingdom is a position absolutely untenable.

The Christian life admits of no neutrality.

You are not saved by generation, but by regeneration.

If the gospel of Jesus Christ is true it is worth every pound of flesh you have.

If it's right to live in a Christian community it is right to be a Christian.

Better that you and I were dead and in our graves than living rejecting Jesus Christ.

British Government Says It Did Not Order Use of Neutral Flag.

London, Feb. 8.—Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador in London today forwarded to the state department at Washington report on Lusitania incident. The ambassador formally reviews the use of the American flag on entering Liverpool Saturday morning, as was related to the members of the embassy staff by Americans who had crossed the Atlantic on the vessel.

Mr. Page has not communicated with the foreign office concerning the incident and as yet there is no official communication regarding the British vessel using the American flag.

As the Lusitania carried 340 cabin passengers, many of them prominent Americans who have wide acquaintance in London, the news of the flag incident spread rapidly in the hotels and clubs until it has become almost the sole topic of conversation.

Merchantman Never Before Involved in Similar Case.

Washington, Feb. 8.—A report from Ambassador Page at London in the hoisting of the American flag on the Cunarder Lusitania while crossing the Irish sea was expected here today and pending its arrival there were no official statements of how the American government regarded the incident. It was stated, however, that while no reports had been called for, one would be asked if the ambassador did not send one today on his own initiative. It was also expected in official quarters that the British admiralty statement on the incident might come to the state department later in the form of an official

(Special Correspondence.)

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 8.—A duel of wits and heated words between noted Southern California beauties featured the recent suit of Mrs. Madge Kingsbury for separate maintenance from her husband, a prominent hotel man here.

Mrs. Kingsbury accused her husband of worshipping feminine pulchritude not wisely but too well, naming Miss Marguerite Gibson, winner of an Ocean park beauty contest, as the "other woman."

Miss Gibson is as brunette as her accuser is fair, and the two offered a striking contrast during their charges and refutations concerning the favor of Kingsbury. Both are noted for their display of gowns at beach promenades.

"When I spoke to him about the other woman he struck me," testified the wife. Miss Gibson declared that she had not known Kingsbury was married, and that their relations had been merely friendly.

LEGISLATURE MUST SPEED UP RAPIDLY

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—The last half of the sixty-ninth biennial session of the general assembly began today when both houses reconvened at 10 o'clock after having recessed over Sunday. The month that remains will be a busy one for the lawmakers as the only piece of legislation of any consequence enacted during the first period is the anti-lobby law.

The administration is pledged to the enactment of a workmen's compensation law, a direct primary measure and a reform of the tax laws, which measures, it is thought, will be pushed along and some definite action taken before the close of the present week. Registration reforms contemplated in as many as a half dozen bills now pending, the specific and the regular appropriation bills and a law making shorter hours of work for women are other important pieces of legislation that will engross the attention of the law-making body for the month that remains. Leaders of both branches declare that all the foregoing measures will be disposed of before the closing days of the session. Thus far efforts have been made to clear the calendar of many of the lesser important bills in order that the administration measures could be taken up separately and without interruption.

While there have been a number of bills introduced seeking to change the road laws, it is said that likely an agreeable measure will be decided on at this session. None of the bills presented has found its way out of committee and the flood of proposed measures on this question which presented themselves early in the session seems to have subsided.

The city manager and the commission form of government for cities in the state will be discussed in the senate chamber, while a public hearing will be held on the bill of Senator George C. Wood. The bill provides for voters of a city being given the right to choose either form of government at an election. Delegations from a number of cities are expected to attend.

Both house and senate democrats probably will hold one or more caucuses this week. The senate will take up the Stutsenburg proposed amendments to the constitution, while the house has the registration measure as a subject for the caucus. Workmen's compensation likely will be made a caucus question later.

Hammond, Ind., Feb. 8.—"Con sarn it," said Constable Frank Hatton, of Roselawn, Ind., as Clyde "Battle Ax" Gibbons took the fifth straight game of rhum. "Who dealt that mess?"

"Maybe you can have some luck with me out," remarked Gibbons, the constable's prisoner, arising from the game. "I'll go upstairs and get ready to leave in the morning."

He didn't wait till morning. Instead he stamped about upstairs for a time and then secretly left with Mrs. Ida Peterson, it is said. They disappeared into the night through a window, via a ladder. And now the constable is under a withering fire of criticism.

Mrs. Peterson, who is the wife of a railroad man, and Gibbons were arrested Friday for alleged misconduct. The women of Roselawn obtained the warrants. Being unable to give bond, the couple was placed in charge of Constable Hatton, who, while waiting for the morning milk train to take them to the county seat, took them to Mrs. Peterson's home for the night.

Knowing the official's weakness for cards, the male prisoner suggested a game. Two other men were called from the county store to "sit in." It was midnight when Gibbons worked his ruse. The constable, in his efforts to recapture the pair, awakened the town. He got George Haskall, an old soldier, out of bed and accused him of harboring the pair. Haskall threatened to shoot each member of the posse with an old army musket. The honor system is taboo in Roselawn now.

coffin, just big enough for him and that's all."

"While virtue is better than vice, yet for one to live a fairly upright and honest life and yet reject Jesus Christ makes that man's influence more detrimental and injurious than the influence of the man who is openly vicious and wicked," he said. Then he went on to explain, declaring that the cause of Christ was never hurt by antagonism, but always by indifference.

"Why, a man had the impudence the other night to tell me there are no bawdy houses here. Supposing the people here would wake up—I say just supposing they would—and try to get these places out of the city and the moral man would stand back neutral. He would be the greatest injury possible. Better you and I be dead and in our graves than living rejecting Jesus Christ."

Suddenly the evangelist stopped as a woman was taking out her crying baby. He did not say a word—it wasn't necessary, for everybody was thinking of the nursery provided for babies at the Westminster church.

Chance of a Generation.

"Oh, Fort Wayne, you have the chance of the generation," the speaker continued. "If this city is not saved during this campaign it will not be won to Christ in this generation. If Terre Haute or Cincinnati—and I can't conceive of anything worse than Cincinnati—had had your chance they would probably have taken it long ago."

The evangelist told the story of a man freezing to death in a snow storm just as he had reached his own yard, to show that the moral man is going to be lost because he is outside, and yet so near the kingdom.

"God forbid that you who are so near the kingdom that on the judgment book it will be written: 'So near home and yet lost, eternally lost.'"

As the people were coming forward the applause was not as enthusiastic as Dr. Lyon thought it should be.

Big Men's Meeting.

The best men's meeting, although not as largely attended perhaps as the first two, was held Sunday afternoon at the tabernacle, when seventy-one men marched bravely forward, taking the evangelist by the hand determined to lead better lives in the future. Gray-haired men together with young men took the stand for Christ. It was a wonderful demonstration.

Dr. Lyon spoke on the subject of "Profit and Loss," a sermon directed particularly to the business man. He declared that Jesus Christ was a business man.

"The trouble about wealth it is often too expensive," he continued. "Let that soak in." While the statement was "soaking in" the evangelist stood and looked at his audience. "The real riches are not on the outside, but on the inside," he continued.

During the course of his sermon Dr. Lyon took occasion to express his disapproval of the term used by certain Fort Wayne newspapers in referring to him as the little evangelist.

"You can't judge a man by the beef he has," he exclaimed. He said some people's idea of great men is such men as Jack Johnson. The evangelist characterized the statement that a business man could not be a Christian as a lie.

Dr. Lyon told of the death of men who, though possessed with wealth and everything that money could buy, men who had education and talent, but could find no peace on earth or even in death. He told of several such men who in their despondency had committed suicide. These men had not accepted Christ or their lives would have been different.

"When the end comes go with the realization that all is well with your soul," he pleaded.

At the conclusion of his sermon Dr. Lyon asked every man who believed that he had told the truth to stand to their feet. Nearly every man in the big audience stood.

Whisky Salesman Converted.

In his opening statements Dr. Lyon told of a conversation with a wholesale whisky salesman. He said that the salesman had told him that as a rule when he came to Fort Wayne he sold on an average of one hundred barrels. This time he said he hasn't sold ten barrels.

"I have been an unbeliever," the salesman told him, "but after that demonstration Saturday evening when all of those railroad men marched to the tabernacle, many of them going forward after the invitation had been given, I went back to my hotel and wrote to the house that I intended to quit my job on the first day of March." Dr. Lyon had scarcely finished telling of the conversation than there was an outburst of applause that fairly made the rafters ring.

"That's what you railroad men did Saturday night," the evangelist shouted after the applause had subsided.

Indiana Going Dry.

The evangelist told of a saloonkeeper attending the meeting Saturday night. He saw the railroad men march to the tabernacle and the big demonstration as they entered the building. After the meeting the saloonkeeper was heard to say: "This looks to me as though Fort Wayne and Indiana is going dry."

One of the features of the song service was a duet by Clinton Willson and Mr. Jones. Mr. Wilson was highly complimented by Mr. Jones for the interest he had taken in organizing the chorus before the meetings began. The male quartet also sang a selection and made a big hit. Prayer was offered by Rev. E. Q. Landeman.

Women's Meetings.

The last of the meetings for women were held Sunday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church and Simpson M. E. church. Mrs. Barr talked at the First Presbyterian church and during her preliminary remarks took occasion to thank the young women ushers for their services, the singers for the time and talent contributed and the women of Fort Wayne who have so generously opened the doors of their homes to the neighborhood prayer meetings. A testimony meeting was in order for six minutes and the women lost no time in responding, expressing thanks to God for His goodness to their families and friends.

During her sermon Mrs. Barr laid particular stress on the call of the voice of God. He has been calling to humanity since the days when He communed daily with the forefathers in the garden of Eden until by wilful disobedience of His commands they were banished. He spoke to Noah and asked him to build the ark for the safety of the races, to Moses and to David and so on and He is still speaking today to the hearts of men, women and children. She said: "God has spoken to us through Jesus who lived among us, ministered to us and suffered for us. We hear the voice of ambition, wealth and society and are wearing ourselves threadbare for the material things and steadily turn a deaf ear to spiritual things."

The Social Evil.

Touching on the social evil and the haunts of vice which are allowed to flourish in cities, the speaker said she prayed to God to hasten the day when the legislators at Indianapolis would quit spending their time on lengthening the length of fishhooks and get some laws into effect which would crush out the heinous resorts that are instrumental in hurling young manhood and womanhood into destruction.

In closing Mrs. Barr urged her hearers not to turn a deaf ear to the voice of God lest they hear too late. No asset in the whole realm of life can recompense for the love of the Lord Jesus Christ. Miss Lucile Vail sang a solo and Mrs. E. A. Donnan led in prayer. There were fifty decisions.

At Simpson M. E. Church.

Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Lyon conducted the meeting for women at the Simpson M. E. church, which was well filled. Mrs. Jones conducted a brief song service during which she asked for testimonies of definite blessings received during these revival services. The response was immediate and enthusiastic. Miss Ethel Doud assisted in the song service and sang as a solo, "No Room in the Inn," also a consecration song during the after meeting.

Mrs. Lyon delivered the address, declaring very emphatically that she is not a preacher or public speaker, but every woman present felt the power of her consecrated Christian life and sympathetic heart throughout the helpful searching message. She spoke first of how Christ was being kept out of the nation, giving as one instance of this nation's failure to adopt prohibition for which broken-hearted women all over this country are pleading. She declared that Christ as Lord and Master is being kept out of many churches and homes.

Mrs. Lyon closed the service with a consecration prayer service for the Christian women present.

Union Sunday School Meeting.

The union Sunday school Sunday morning filled every seat in the tabernacle. The seating of the schools was arranged by the superintendent of the tabernacle, G. R. Sutton. The schools from the smaller churches were seated in the front. A bouquet of roses was sent by the W. C. T. U. and had a prominent place on the speaker's platform. Dr. Lyon made the announcements of the morning. He spoke of the fact that the last two weeks of the campaign were beginning and he asked that the parents of the high school pupils whom he said had been reported to him as refusing to allow their young people to attend the tabernacle meetings on account of their studies permit the boys and girls to come even though they might miss some of their work. Dr. Lyon commended the action of the acting principal of the high school in the stand which he had taken in the matter of dancing. Tuesday noon there will be a prayer meeting held at the high school for the high school girls. Dr. Lyon announced that next Tuesday would be another workers' day similar to that of last Tuesday when the work of canvassing the city calling at every home and inviting the people and praying in the homes would be completed.

The group prayer meetings which were to be held in the various churches that morning will be adjourned, and instead the prayer meetings will be held in the homes from 9:30 to 10 o'clock. After the adjournment of these meetings the workers will go out two by two to complete the canvass already begun.

Reads a Report.

Without using the name or giving the number of the section Dr. Lyon read a report which he said was typical of the work which was done all over the city last Tuesday. The report stated that the captain and five assistants had visited 99 homes, had been rejected by only five, and had been royally treated in many Catholic homes in which they had called. At one door where a call was made the workers were told that they could come in "if they wouldn't knock the saloons." Dr. Lyon commended the action of a certain Catholic priest in commending the tabernacle meeting to his church. There were 427 decisions at the Sunday school meeting and 29 decisions at the regular morning service.

Meetings in Churches.

The following churches will hold meetings Monday night at their respective churches as same were reported to E. H. Clifford, acting press and publicity chairman: Grace Reformed, First Evangelical, Simpson M. E., West Jefferson Church of Christ, First M. E., Rescue Mission, East Creighton Avenue Church of Christ, Calvary U. B., St. Paul's M. E., Westminster Presbyterian, Bethany Presbyterian, Church of God, South Side Baptist, West Creighton Avenue Church of Christ.

Saturday Evening.

More than 600 railroad men attended the meeting Saturday evening, marching to the tabernacle in a body headed by the Elks band. As the delegation entered the big building the band played "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and there was loud cheering and applauding.

Preliminary to his sermon Dr. Lyon said he did not want to be misunderstood on the state prohibition bill now pending in the legislature. He declared that if every editor in the state would do his full duty in advocating the driving out of the booze business the bill would pass and be incorporated in the laws of Indiana. He made that same statement on Friday evening, but had been misquoted by "a reporter who has not been covering the meetings regularly."

Dr. Lyon spoke on "The Leprosy of Sin," comparing the leprosy of sin with that of physical leprosy. During the course of his sermon he declared that he had been half inclined to bring a stack of letters he had received and read them. The letters were from heart-broken wives and mothers, he declared. One letter from a mother, he said, told how her daughter had been going to a wine-room, where the proprietor locks the door and leaves the girls to the prey of vicious men.

"God help those girls, but God damn that business—that is not blasphemy, it is as sacred a thing as I have said from this platform," he exclaimed. There was a total of seventy-nine decisions Saturday.

Features of the song service were two solos by Barney Krull, who sang "The Rosary" and "The Mighty Deed," and a selection by a quartet composed of shopmen.

The quartet was composed of James A. Foster, Valentine Ewig, Harry Emmerson and Charles B. Waterson, all Pennsylvania shopmen, and the singing was one of the big hits of the meeting.

Meetings at Larwill.

The Weaver evangelistic party has closed its meetings at Larwill. In spite of the inclemency of the weather on the last day a large crowd gathered to enjoy the last of what was a very spirited and spiritual series of meetings. The little town was stirred as it has not been in years. Almost a hundred came out for Christ. Although many thought the town too small for the Weaver party the evangelist easily raised the expenses incurred and on the last day a handsome thank offering was raised for Mr. Weaver.

The Weaver party has been attending the Lyon meetings here during the last few days.

Revival Notes.

Thursday will be mothers' day at the tabernacle. Every person is requested to wear a red carnation if mother is living and a white carnation if mother is dead.

Luncheons for the business girls were so popular that Mrs. Barr has been urged to continue them. The Y. W. C. A. has invited the business girls to lunch there Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 11 to 1:15 o'clock. The dining-room will be open to them.

PEACE MEETING HAS VERY WARLIKE TONE

Chicago, Feb. 8.—J. J. O'Leary, of New York, president of the American Truth society, yesterday denounced England, criticized America and pleaded for Germany at a mass meeting of the American Neutrality league, of which the avowed purpose was the promotion of peace.

His mention of William Jennings Bryan brought forth hisses, and Jenkin Lloyd Jones, pastor of All Souls church, arose and declared he would leave the platform unless neutrality were preserved. The meeting was one of the largest ever held in the city, a great percentage of the audience being Germans.

"I believe it was right in this hall that William Jennings Bryan, our gifted secretary of state, proclaimed that the republican party was trying to crucify the people of this country upon a cross of gold," Mr. O'Leary said. "He now is trying to crucify the fatherlands of more than 25,000,000 of our people upon a cross of British gold."

Chairman Jones introduced Frank Buchanan, a labor leader, scheduled as "a neutral speaker," with the proviso that "he may present himself to you if he chooses to take his life in his hands."

Mr. Buchanan was met with hoots and cat calls when he defended the sincerity of purpose of Mr. Bryan.

"While I may not agree with the secretary of state," he said, "I do believe in his sincerity in his work for peace and I believe he will be able to do some work that will be valuable. You are not going to make progress by appealing to prejudice."

Mr. Jones, who had been asked to act as chairman, arrived half an hour late. When he reached the coliseum he found the sidewalk lined by men selling banners bearing pictures of the German emperor and the German eagle.

O'Leary was talking, roundly applauded by the audience, when Jones entered the hall. German banners were hanging from the galleries. American flags were outnumbered.

Jones pleaded for a place for the allies' flags: "Where is the rose of England?" he demanded. "Why is the French flag not there? Where is the Russian flag?"

"Put them all there, I say. If this is a pro-German and an anti-British meeting—and mind you, my attitude would be the same if it were pro-British and anti-German—I have no place here and respectfully beg leave to withdraw."

Before the arrival of Chairman Jones, the meeting adopted the declaration of the principles of neutrality adopted at Washington at a conference of various organizations as well as formal resolutions advocating the prohibition of the export of arms, ammunition and munitions of war, calling for the national control of the manufacture of weapons for peace and harmony in the promotion of neutrality without arousing animosities. The resolutions deprecated the use of airships as a means of dropping bombs or other missiles of destruction on unfortified and non-militant communities.

If It is Right To Live Near the Kingdom of God It Is Right To Live in That Kingdom, Says Dr. Lyon

NOT FAR FROM THE KINGDOM.

It is interesting to note how the Lord Jesus always put the very best possible construction on every human motive. Christ was in the shadow of the cross. For days His enemies had been dogging His foot-steps, trying to entrap Him in His speech. They had been plying Him with numerous questions and at last one steps out from the ranks of His opponents, whose manner seemed different from the rest, evidently bearing the stamp of sincerity. This scribe put this question to our Lord: "Which is the greatest commandment of all?" Jesus, quoting from the book of Deuteronomy, replied, "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength, this is the first commandment." And the second like, namely this: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The scribe seemed to enter with enthusiasm into this reply and responded: "Well, Master, thou hast said the truth; for there is one God and there is none other but He. And to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices."

Now, Jesus might reasonably have classed this man with His opponents, but, detecting what He believed was a mark of sincerity in the man, and especially noting the aptness of his reply, our Lord exclaimed, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The kingdom of God was the central truth in the teaching of Christ. He did not talk much about salvation, but rather about the causes that produced salvation, the results that come from citizenship in the kingdom of God. Jesus only rarely used the word, "heaven," but on every page of His ministry He spoke of the kingdom of heaven or the kingdom of God. When in reality and in truth you accept the King of that kingdom, Jesus Christ, as your personal Lord and Master, you become a citizen of that kingdom. There is no salvation outside of the kingdom of God. The citizens of the kingdom are heirs of God. Upon them is bestowed eternal inheritance, protection, salvation, development and joy.

That one is not far from the kingdom of God, first of all who understands clearly the requirements for entrance. If it were not so serious, it would really be ridiculous what foolish ideas some people have about salvation. You ask one man, "Are you a Christian?" He replies, "Surely I am a Christian. I had good Christian parents." He seems to think that he gained religion by heredity, as he would the color of his hair or eyes, or cast of countenance. What your parents are or were not does not affect your standing at the bar of God. Every one must give an account of himself. You ask another one, "Are you a Christian?" He replies, "Certainly, I am a Christian; I have a good, Christian wife." Some men keep their religion like their property, all in their wife's name.

That man is not far from the kingdom of God who understands that in order to be saved he must forsake his sins, and to the extent of his ability make restitution for sin. He must surrender his life to do the will of God in everything, and receive Jesus as his personal Savior and Lord. In the next place that one is not far from the kingdom, who realizes and acknowledges that he is a sinner. It is almost amusing to hear some folks tell how good they are. You wonder that their wings have not sprouted long ago. Whenever a man begins to boast of his goodness, you can put it down that he is trying to conceal his wickedness. If you think you are all right, it is very certain that you are about all wrong. The nearer you approach Christ and the more of His grace and love you have in your heart, the more you will be conscious of your own short-comings and unworthiness. The better you are, the more ready will you, in humility, confess your sinfulness.

In the next place, that one is not far from the kingdom of God, who has a real love for the things that are good and true and Godly. I have often been greatly gratified at the close of a service when many have come forward expressing their purpose to begin a Christian life, by asking, "All of you who are glad to see so many coming out for God, will you lift your hands?" And many who are not yet Christians themselves often have been among the first to signify their pleasure in seeing others taking this step. Will you just now apply this test to your own life? When you have seen so many men and women walking down these aisles night after night and declaring their purpose to begin the Christian life, have you been gratified by the sight, or, on the other hand, has there been a secret annoyance and displeasure? In your heart of hearts have you said to yourself, "I wish there would not be so many coming out for Christ." Have you been pleased or displeased by these great victories for the Lord? Moreover, do you enjoy the fellowship of God's people? Do you take delight in hearing the word of God preached and the gospel sung? Is there in your own heart a real love for the things that are true and pure and good, or, on the other hand, do you take more enjoyment in the evil and the impure and the ungodly? Answer these questions for yourself. I believe there are many here tonight that although you cannot say as yet that you are Christians, you do not have the consciousness that you are saved, and yet you take sincere pleasure in seeing the cause of Christ built up. You enjoy the fellowship of Christian people and enjoy hearing the gospel preached or sung. If you come under this class, to you Christ is saying, as He said to that scribe centuries ago, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

Now we are led to face a solemn truth. Nearness to the kingdom of God is not sufficient. A man may be within a block of the station when the train pulls out, or of the wharf when the ship weighs anchor and puts out to sea, and he will get left just as much as if he were a hundred miles away. Supposing a man were a candidate for office, and at the election got within one vote of the successful nominee: he would be defeated just as much as if he got no votes at all. Supposing a man were out west to one of the United States land offices, when the drawing was to take place for government lands. When he returns home you ask him, "Did you get a piece of land? Were you successful in the drawing?" "Almost," he says, "the fortunate number was 5,898 and my number was 5,897." You say to him, "Well, that did not do you any good. You might just as well have had no number at all." The fact that you are near to the kingdom of God, unless you have crossed the threshold and entered into the kingdom, leaves you outside the gate just as much as if you were far, far away.

In the next place, nearness to the kingdom of God is apt to produce in your mind a feeling of self-sufficiency. The very fact that you have lived a good life, that you are honest, upright and moral, that you have in your heart a love for the things that are good and true, and are conscious that it would not be very much of a step, or make very much of a change in your conduct if you did become a Christian, is in a sense that may be the source of your greatest peril. You think that you are so near to becoming a Christian, that you are not far from the kingdom, and this may cause you to remain content where you are, and thus you may be in greater danger of being lost than the man who is far, far away from the Kingdom, who realizes his lost condition and is anxious to be saved.

When Hannibal, the great general of Carthage, recruited his army for the conquest of Rome and marched across northern Africa, across the Mediterranean near Gibraltar, the pillar of Hercules, he went up through Spain and southern France, and at last, after months of terrible hardship and toil and suffering, his army crossed the Alps mountains, and they came down on the rich, fertile, sun-kissed plains of northern Italy. Hannibal knew that his army was stronger than the army of the Romans, and feeling sure that at any time he could march south and conquer the enemy, said to himself, "There is no need of haste." And so, with his army he settled down in winter quarters at Capua, and there his soldiers became effeminate and weak through ease and luxury and lost their strength and vigor. The result was that when at last they did march south and gave battle to the Romans, they were disastrously defeated. Their nearness to victory was the cause of their destruction. May it not be the same way with you? You, who have a real love for the things that are honest and good and of good report; you who have rejoiced to see others coming out for Christ; you who have been very near to decision yourself, these very qualities which are commendable may prove the cause of your eternal doom.

Nearness to the kingdom of God, without entering into that kingdom, is a position absolutely untenable, a course totally inconsistent. If it is right to live near the kingdom of God, it is right to live in that kingdom. The Christian life admits of no neutrality. If Jesus Christ is what He claims to be, if He has the power on earth to forgive sin and grant everlasting life, it is the greatest, mightiest fact of this universe. If Christ is not all that He claims, if He has not the power to forgive sin and impart eternal life to mankind, He is the greatest imposter the world ever knew and is unworthy even of our respect. Between these two positions there is no neutrality.

A man says, "Well, I am not a Christian myself, but I give my money to support the church and Christian enterprise." "Why do you do that?" "Oh," he replies, "because the church is the best thing we have on earth, and Christianity is true and right." "Well, if that is so you ought not merely to give your means to the cause of Christ, but you ought to give yourself." In other words, you ought to do more or do less. If the gospel of Christ is false, you ought to oppose it. But if it is what you admit it to be, the great power on earth for the uplift of mankind, there is only one course worthy of you, as a reasonable, consistent man, and that is to stand forth earnestly and loyally declaring your allegiance to Christ and to the Christian life. It would be as if a foreigner would come to this country to make his home, and enjoy all the benefits of America, and yet refuse to pay taxes or to enter into citizenship. If our country is the right place to live in, it is the country to which we ought to declare our allegiance and defend its institutions.

In like manner this living in nearness to the kingdom of God, and yet refusing to take upon yourself the responsibilities of its citizenship, makes your influence upon others especially detrimental. I am going to make a statement which may startle some of you, and at the outset you may say you do not believe, but I feel absolutely sure of my ground. The statement is this: That while virtue is always better than vice, and purity than impurity, yet for one to live a fairly upright and moral life, without becoming a Christian, makes the influence of that one from the spiritual standpoint especially disastrous and detrimental. In other words, for you to be a moral man and reject Christ does more to keep others away from salvation than does the immoral and the vicious man. I hear some one say, "I do not believe that. You will have to prove it." All right, I can. Let me ask you who has the greatest influence upon you yourself. Is it the man that is openly vulgar and vicious and vile, the thief or the drunkard? "Why," you say, "no, the only influence that kind of a person has upon me is repulsion." Who is the man that has the greatest influence on you? You reply, "It is the man who is the most intelligent, the most honorable and upright." Now that is just the point I want to make. Just as the man who is the most upright and honorable has the greatest influence upon you, so if you are living that kind of a life of uprightness and honesty you have the greatest influence upon others, and if you reject Christ, neglect His salvation and refuse to come out and take your stand on the Lord's side, by that very act you are saying to others that they ought to take a similar course. Therefore, out of your own mouth I have proved the truth of this statement. It would be as if a great campaign for moral reform was in progress in a city, and a prominent man, with a reputation for good citizenship, remained inactive and indifferent. By that course he would do more to weaken the power and zeal of the promoters of civic righteousness than a score of people, notoriously wicked and vicious.

Moreover, nearness to the kingdom of God leaves the soul absolutely without excuse for not entering into the kingdom. The fact that you can say, "I am not bad, dishonest or impure and there would not be many things I would have to change in my life if I accepted Christ. It would only be a step for me to come out into the Christian life," leaves you with far less reason for remaining away from God than the man who is far, far away. Which of two young men would have the less excuse for not having a college education, one, the son of well-to-do parents, living in a college town, almost within the shadow of the college buildings; or another young man, the son of poor parents, living a hundred miles away from college? Why, you say, "The young man in good circumstances, who lived near the college and whose parents were able and willing to give the benefits of an education, has far less excuse for not taking a college course than the poor fellow, residing far away with others dependent upon him."

Against what city was it that Jesus hurled His most scathing maledictions? You answer, "It was against Capernaum." What was Capernaum? "It was the city where He had lived and performed many of His greatest miracles." Hear Him as He exclaimed, "Oh, Capernaum, Capernaum, thou, in thine opportunities, are exalted to heaven. I tell thee thou shalt be cast down to hell. If the mighty works that have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have repented long ago in sack-cloth and ashes." Supposing Jesus would come to this city at the close of these meetings, could you not hear Him exclaim, "You who have lived in this community, where the gospel has been proclaimed, where night after night the invitation has been extended, where many others have come out on the Lord's side, you, who in your privilege and position were exalted up to the very gates of heaven itself, and yet you refused to enter in those gates, you who rejected Jesus Christ and His mercy, I tell you, you shall be cast down to hell."

This nearness to the kingdom of God ought to awaken in your heart a spirit of urgency. You will not always be so near. If you do not enter in you are going to drift away. There is a tide in the affairs of man, which, taken at its flood, leads on to glory, but neglected the strands and shores of time will be strewn with the wrecks of hopes and possibilities. Success consists in taking advantage of opportunity. Let me illustrate this truth from every-day affairs. Some years ago I was holding meetings in a city in central California, and near the close of the campaign a prominent lawyer, a worker in the meetings, came to me and said, "Mr. Lyon, have you ever been to the Yosemite valley?" I said, "No, I never have, but I have always desired to do so." "Well," said he, "I have an offer to make to you. I have a good, strong team of horses, a covered wagon and a complete camping outfit. You can take some friends and go over to Yosemite and I will see that the outlay of the expense will be practically nothing." It did seem an excellent opportunity, but I had an invitation to hold a campaign the next year in a city somewhat nearer to Yosemite and I finally concluded to delay my visit to the park until I returned. But I did not go back to California the next year, nor the next, nor the next. Now, eight years have gone by and the prospects are I will never get that near to that great scenery again.

Some years ago I was talking with a friend one day about a proposed trip I was planning to Arizona, and I made the remark that on my return I intended to go around by the way of the Grand canyon. He said to me, "Now, let me give you a word of advice. I want you to profit by my mistake. On going to southern California a few years ago, I had planned to take in the Grand canyon on my return trip, but business called me north to Portland and Seattle, and I found it necessary to return by the northern route, so I missed that great opportunity. This is my advice, go to the Grand canyon on your way out to Arizona, and then you will be sure of it." I saw there was wisdom in his advice. I changed my route and went out on the Santa Fe and stopped at the Grand canyon for three days, and beheld the beauty of that scenery. That canyon is 200 miles long, fourteen miles wide and a mile deep, and colored with the beauty of flowers. I went from there down to Phoenix, Ariz., found a good boarding place, unpacked my suit case and settled down to have a much needed rest. But the next day I received a telegram from home, saying that the children were down with scarlet fever, and I immediately repacked my satchel and hastened home. If I had not gone to the Grand canyon on my way out, I never would have gotten there. The very fact that you are near to the kingdom of God ought to arouse in your heart the element of immediateness. Take advantage of your privilege, enter into that kingdom while you can. Soon it will be too late.

In the last place, the fact that you have been not far from the kingdom of heaven, if you neglect to enter in, will make your eternal doom that much the more sad and bitter. Throughout the ages memory will be awakened. You will remember the chance you had, how near you came to salvation, with how little effort you could have crossed the line and been saved. They told me up in South Dakota, that in the early settlement of that region a farmer started out from home on a bright, clear winter morning with his horses and sleigh, to make a trip across the country. The weather was ideal and he reached his destination and after a dinner and rest he started to return. When he got out upon the open prairie, suddenly the sky became overcast with heavy clouds and the wind began to blow and the snow began to fall, and it became intensely cold. There came on one of those Dakota blizzards, that no one has ever been able to graphically describe. Before long the track in the road was obliterated. The man became numb with the cold, the lines dropped from his hands, the horses then unguided, directing themselves by their homing instinct, started across the prairie. All that night the storm raged about the cabin. The wife and family of this man spent the hours in sleepless anxiety. When daylight dawned, they shoveled the snow from the front of the house, which was banked almost to the eaves, and out in the door-yard, between the house and the barn, they found the faithful team and the sleigh, and in the bottom of the wagon box they found the frozen body of the husband and father. He had died in his own door-yard and was almost home.

There are those in this building, who night after night have heard the gospel of Christ, who have been convinced that the Christian life was the right life to live. You have rejoiced to see others coming out for God. You have enjoyed the preaching of the word and these gospel songs. Can it be that you will hesitate on the border of the Christian life, almost into the kingdom and yet be eternally lost.

When the English steamer, "The Royal Charter," some years ago sailed from Liverpool on a long sea voyage, it contained in its list of passengers and crew some relative or friend of almost every citizen in that city. When the time came that the steamer was expected in port, a large share of the people of that city thronged the pier at daybreak, watching for the first sight of the incoming steamer. As they were anxiously awaiting, the terrible news came that the ship had struck upon a rock at midnight and had gone down with all its passengers and sailors. Said Dr. William Taylor, a pastor of Liverpool, "The first mate of that ill fated steamer was a member of my own church." The sad duty fell to that pastor to break the news of the death of that husband and father to the members of his family. Hastening up to the home, he knocked at the door. The daughter opened the door, and the mother looking over her daughter's shoulder exclaimed, "Pastor, we are very glad to see you. Come right in, we are waiting breakfast. The Royal Charter is due into port now. Husband will be here soon. You stay and sit down with us, and our joy will be complete." Then said the pastor, "I took the two hands of that wife in mine, and looking into her face said, 'I will have to tell you that you will never see your husband again on this earth. The Royal Charter struck upon a rock at midnight and all on board have perished.'" Said Dr. Taylor, "To my dying day I will never forget the sad, heart-broken wail of that wife, as with blanched face and bloodless lips, wringing her hands she paced up and down the room screaming, 'Oh, husband, husband, so near home! so near home! and yet lost!" God grant that it may not be said of you, upon the judgment books of eternity, that you were so near home and yet lost.

SEES WORLD'S PEACE IN WORLD-WIDE MAIL

Philadelphia, Feb. 8.—A world postal service, with low, uniform rates, will be proposed at a meeting of the World Postal league, in Washington, to be held in the rooms of the Washington chamber of commerce on February 22. James L. Cowles, who has called the meeting, was one of the foremost agitators for the parcel post system now in operation.

It is the belief of Cowles and his associates that the federation of the world can be accomplished better by a world-wide postal service and parcel post service, unhampered by national boundaries, than, perhaps, by peace treaties, proposals for universal disarmament or appeals to The Hague tribunal. A better understanding between the peoples of all nations would grow as a result of such a world postal service, it is said, just as the same result was attained in the United States by the removal of state tariffs and the establishment of a common postal service in this country.

On this phase of the question, Cowles writes: "When Washington and his peers met at Philadelphia in 1787, they found our thirteen states on the verge of war with each other by reason of the hostile tariff laws and other restrictions which they had placed upon their interstate intercourse. To prevent this and to insure the peace and prosperity of all the people of all the states, they proposed a general federation with no legal obstacles to intercourse between the peoples of the different states, and the binding of them together by a common postal service."

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

Corporation Must Pay on Lobby and Campaign Expenses.

Washington, Feb. 8.—In a synopsis of income tax regulations just made public, Commisisoner Osborn, of the international revenue bureau, explained that money expended by corporations for lobbying or campaign contributions can not be deducted as expenses in making returns. He also made it clear that dividends on corporation bonds would be subject to the tax both as part of the corporation's net earnings and as the income of bondholders. Mr. Osborn announced he would issue hereafter monthly synopsis of rulings for information of collectors and taxable citizens and corporations.

THE SENTINEL'S DAILY SCRIPTURE READING.

Luke 6 :17-30.

17 And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God.

22 Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.

25 Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you.

28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

29 And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

At the Half-Way Post.

The Indiana legislature this week begins the last half of the present assembly session, and it is certain to be the busier half of the biennial spasm of law-making for we Hoosier folk. There has been during the first four weeks of the session about the usual flood of new bills, about the average amount of time killed in skirmishing and polite preliminaries, and the legislators must now settle down to business if they expect to dispose of the mass of legislation on the schedule.

The outstanding accomplishment of the early portion of the session is, of course, the anti-lobby law. Already we find ourselves in a maze of doubt regarding the interpretation of the statute, which has just been signed by Governor Ralston, but there is hope that the law will largely accomplish its purpose in compelling the professional lobbyist to come out in the open and do his fighting, either for or against any pending measure. That will be highly desirable from the people's point of view, even though it is a trifle tough on those patriots who have managed heretofore to make a living by exercising "pulls" either real or imaginary, with the Indiana law-makers.

The coming four weeks in the legislature will be of marked interest because of the fact that at least half a dozen big issues must be met and disposed of. These include the bill for state-wide prohibition, the plan for flood-prevention, workmen's compensation, tax reform, primary election reform and the question of reforming the Indiana registration law. Four bills on workmen's compensation are already under consideration by the committee. Tax reform is taken up in one of the twenty-two proposed amendments to the constitution. Half a dozen bills dealing with proposed registration changes are pending, and following Mr. Bryan's address there will doubtless be offered a number of bills providing for the state-wide primary, though the democratic majority in the legislature is by no means a unit in favoring a move of this character. The job cut out for the Indiana legislature in the remaining half of its session is big enough to engage the attention of the membership down to the last moment of the term. There is no time to be wasted on by-play or trivialities.

Sheldon Livingston lives on a farm near the little hamlet of Porcupine, Wis. There are reasons why you ought to know him. Sheldon is 11 years old. The schoolhouse is two miles from the Livingston home. Morning and night, through snow, rain or shine, Sheldon walked this distance, swinging his dinner pail and his school books. In four and a half years he has not missed a day! Think of this, city children, you who complain when you have to walk four blocks; who stay home every chance you get, clap your hands every time there's a holiday and would play hookey all the time, if you dared! Now we have no idea what kind of a man Sheldon Livingston will make. He may become president of the United States or only a plain citizen living on a Wisconsin farm. But one thing is certain. In whatever niche in life it shall be his destiny to be placed he will be a steady, punctual, dependable person—the kind you won't have to watch. To borrow a phrase from the stable, he'll stand without being hitched.

Diplomats in Washington are manifesting much interest in the European trip of Col. E. M. House, of New York, close friend of President Wilson, who has just landed in England "on a tour of the capitals of Europe." Despite denials from the white house, there is a strong suspicion that Colonel House may be a sort of informal peace envoy of the president to sound out the possibilities of a peace dicker to end the war. It must be admitted that it is quite impossible to conceive any mission of pleasure or mere love of travel that could lure one to the European centers at this time. If Colonel House as the spokesman of President Wilson is going to attempt to negotiate peace, more power to him!

"A City of 550,000—Modern, Historic, Growing and Full of Promise—A Surprise and a Delight to Visiting Americans, Who Know Almost Nothing of It—Cubans Dislike Us and Prefer German Wares"—A Search for the Reason.

(Roger W. Babson, world-renowned business expert, writer and statistician, now in South America, has been commissioned to tell "the truth about South America" in a series of articles, of which this is the first. Another article by Mr. Babson will appear in a day or two. Watch for it.)

Havana, Cuba, Feb, 8.—The first surprise one always gets when entering Havana (or Habana, as it is spelled in Cuba) is the architecture of the island.

We are apt to think of Cuba as new territory and of Havana, Santiago and Matanza as "coming cities."

When we go to Spain we expect to see low, stone houses, with red-tiled roofs and pink or blue walls. We do not think, however, of seeing a quaint Spanish city within three days' sail from New York.

"How queer and picturesque everything looks," said a group of American business men to me as our Red Star steamship Kroonland entered the beautiful harbor of Havana and passed Moro castle.

"We did not expect to see such old Spanish architecture down here," they remarked. "Why, we should think we were entering the old port of Cadiz, in Spain, or passing along the coast of Italy!"

Yes, these American millionaires, owners of great factories in the United States—men who are presidents of big corporations for which, perhaps, you yourself work—had never before realized that Cuba is almost as old as Spain itself!

In fact, Cuba is simply "Little Spain," while Havana and the other Cuban cities are as truly Spanish as are the ancient towns of the old world, about which Columbus wandered when a boy.

I repeat this conversation on shipboard, as it, perhaps, illustrates better than anything else one reason why we don't sell more goods in Cuba.

The truth is that American manufacturers don't know Cuba.

The American people don't know Cuba. Even some American school teachers don't know Cuba. As I turn to my child's geography I find nothing to show that Cuba is a quaint old land with queer, set customs. No, our manufacturers and business men think of Cuba as a "new possession," a new island which has just come up from the bottom of the ocean or as a new territory, like Oklahoma, which has just been opened for settlement.

And this is why our business men do not sell more goods in Cuba. When they treat the Spanish merchants of Cuba with the respect and consideration to which they are entitled—by history and position—then there will be more work for the factories of the United States.

What of Havana.

It has beautiful temperature; it is most stragetically located.

The harbor is one of the best in the world. There is nothing against Havana which I can think of excepting the hotel charges! If you visit Havana bring along a tent, for the hotel charges are fearfully high!

I believe Havana is destined to become a very healthful city. Although the authorities would not let me land, when I was here last year because a rat had the bubonic plague, yet these unsanitary conditions will not long exist.

Some day an American will take a ship load of rat traps to Cuba and catch them all! However, with the exception of a South American city about which I will tell you in a later article, I know of no other city where I had rather buy real estate today than in Havana.

The population of Havana is 550,000. It has fine streets; electric lights, sewers, municipal water and other improvements.

Five high office buildings are now being built, and one sees as many automobiles on The Prado as on the boulevards of any American city.

I don't like to lose money any more than do you, but I am willing to bet on Havana.

What of the Cubans?

Last evening, as I was walking about the Plaza listening to the music, an American manufacturer, who is traveling with me, said: "Babson, I wonder why it is that these Cubans so dislike us Americans? They seem to forget that we freed them from Spanish rule."

Said I: "Come with me tomorrow and call upon one of the leading merchants of the city and, perhaps, you'll learn why."

"Very well," said he. "I'll gladly go with you in order to learn the truth why these Cubans, at the same price, will buy inferior goods from my German competitors rather than give the orders to me and my other American friends."

The next day we went to a large commission house in one of those old-fashioned "carry-alls," such as our fathers used to drive over cobble-stoned streets—where the paving was laid under Spanish rule many years ago.

Upon reaching my Cuban friend's place of business, the American with me said:

"Why, this isn't much of a place; or at least they have not much business; it seems too quiet."

Now, it really was not lack of business which set my American friend adrift. It was the fact that these Cuban merchants and their employes take life calmly and sensibly.

Instead of working in the hot sun as American employes are often compelled to do in summer time, great awnings and curtains are hung to protect the Cuban clerks from the heat and dust.

Moreover, often these curtains are hung at the outer edges of the sidewalk so as to protect the passer-by. How much pleasanter it would make shopping in your own city in summer if the merchants would adopt these awnings and curtains at their sidewalk's edge so that you could walk in the shade.

Instead of hurrying past the store windows to get out of the sun, you would then leisurely walk along and inspect the window displays.

But instead of doing this, some of the storekeepers in your town pull down the curtains in their store windows and even shut out from view such displays as they have!

"Why," said my American friend, "these clerks look as if they were on a summer vacation—see their light shoes, their white clothes and their comfortable collars! They are not hurrying, perspiring and crowding about as do my employes. It looks to me as if business was pretty dull."

But when the Cuban merchant arrived and stated the monthly output of his store, my American friend was convinced that haste does not always signify good business, nor does perspiration always mean prosperity.

In fact, when this man returns to the United States, I think he will institute changes in his great store so that next summer it will be more attractive to both clerks and customers.

After first talking of general matters (and one must never be so rude with the Latin-American people as to start right in by talking business) the American asked: "Why is it that you don't seem to love us. A Havana merchant told me yesterday that, at the same price, he always purchased of English and German manufacturers."

Thereupon the Cuban became serious.

Pittsburg Dispatch.

Investigation by the federal authorities is bringing out some facts about the wheat situation that will serve to correct much popular misunderstanding. Last year's crop was the largest in our history, 891,000,000 bushels, which, with 77,000,000 carried over from 1913, gave a total available supply of 968,000,000 bushels. Our per capita consumption of flour (one barrel annually, or five bushels of wheat(, is 500,000,000 bushels. To this must be added 840,000,000 bushels for seeding, a total of 584,000,000, which left 310,000,000 bushels available for export.

We have exported from July 1, 1914, to February 1, 1915, 208,000,000 bushels, leaving 108,000,000 bushels that can yet be shipped abroad. Our present shipments average 8,000,000 bushels a week, with no indications of any material increase, so that we have enough to maintain that rate untilsome time in May, or shortly before the 1915 crop is harvested.

Some 4,100,000 acres more winter wheat has been planted than in the previous year, and there is no doubt of a great increase in spring wheat, 100,000,000 bushels or a total crop this year of a billion bushels, double our own consumption without the seeding.

That this condition is not reflected in the price of wheat or in the agitation over the price of bread argues that whatever scarcity has been created is an artificial creation. There is undoubtedly, by these figures, plenty of wheat in the country. The question, then, is where is the wheat? The millers point to the grain men, and the grain men to the farmers. The Department of Justice proposes to find out whether war or speculation is the cause of the present exorbitant prices, and should hasten to do so.

AIRCRAFT FOR SERVICE.

(Indianapolis Star.)

We do not hear much lately about aeroplanes in this country. They do not fill a general want at this time as do automobiles or other land vehicles, and since the novelty has worn off—for pretty much everybody has seen at least one of the aerial machines in flight—they have not attracted general attention.

But interest is taken in them for all that. The Aero Club of America—the name is impressive if the actual organization is not—is planning to encourage the use of aircraft in peaceful pursuits, such as the carrying of mail, by establishing a series of landing stations throughout the country. Admiral Perry, a member of the club, is at work on the selection of points where the stations are to be placed. They will number nearly 2,000 and it is expected to place one near every city of a population exceeding 50,000.

By bringing aeroplanes into common use in this way it is suggested that a reserve of men and flying machines may thus be built up, available, like the militia, in time of war. Orville Wright is pleased with the movement and says the mania for speed has been chiefly responsible for holding back the greater use of the flying machine and manufacturers have given attention to speed before everything else.

With the aeroplane devoted to simpler uses and a moderate speed, no good reason is evident why it should not be made serviceable in many ways. The successful and prolonged flights made in the war abroad will serve to give greater confidence in the staying qualities of the aircraft. And to the assertion on this side of the water that they cannot carry heavy mail sacks the answer will be returned that they often carry two passengers, and that the bombs borne across the North sea by German aeroplanes, as well as by Zeppelins, are probably as heavy as mail. It is not unlikely that the aeroplane will be a frequent traveler across the sky before very long.

CITIES MAY GET BOON.

Indiana Times.

Through the Wood senate bill, No. 184, Indiana cities are offered a chance to vote for themselves to adopt or reject the commission form of city government or the city manager plan for the conduct of municipalities. Nothing more important than this optional bill is to be up at the present session of the legislature.

Any plan by which the people may be enabled to escape the evils or from a enabled to escape from the evils or from a part of the worst evils of the existing system of municipal misgovernment, waste and inefficiency, ought to be greeted by the people with the utmost hopefulness and earnest concern. It is to be hoped that the citizens who are interested in municipal reform and modern progress in city management on business lines will turn out Monday night and make themselves heard at the public hearing on the Wood bill. The hearing is to be at the senate chamber.

It is through the discussion of all phases of the situation that the people finally will arrive at some proper conclusion. If there is a chance to get something better than the existing system it is the duty of the citizen to inform himself and to prepare to take prompt advantage of his opportunity. It is not the idea to force any particular form of government on Indiana cities. The people themselves may adopt the system they wish to adopt. The enactment of a good law granting this opportunity to cities to make positive steps in advance along good government lines would mark the present session of the legislature as monumental in its achievement as a progressive session.

Van Auken Refutes Charge.

Senator Van Auken, also a member of the committee, took the floor in the absence of Senators Clarke and Elsner and refuted the charges made by the minority leader.

"This bill was considered in committee and I myself voted to report it out to the senate, and Senator Robinson was at that meeting before I was. What is more, the bill was considered on more than one day," said Senator Van Auken.

Rebinson's motion to recommit the bill lost, whereupon he moved the second reading of the bill be deferred until tomorrow. His motion carried, with several members of the majority supportin git.

Efforts to Huryy.

Efforts in both houses to hurry the business along featured the sessions his morning. Senator VanNuys, president pro tem, who presided over the senate in the absence of Lieut. Gov. O'Neill, stopped the roll call for bills on second reading after it had advanced about half way and asked the senators to call their bills up, in order that they could be disposed of this week. He also asked the chairmen of the different committees to get their bills reported out as soon as possible and called their attention to the senate rules which reqire that all senate bills be reported whin six days of their introduction. Heaid there was more than 100 bills noin the hands of committees and that evy one of them must be acted on in onway or the other this week. More th thirty bills were given second readinand placed in readiness for final consiration in the two houses, following threquest of the presiding officer. Ehteen new bills, nine in each house, ve introduced.

The bill to pension state teachers, which was drafted by the State Teachers' association, was introduced in the senate and house by Representative Friend. Senator Kattman's bill provides that wherever there is any railroad more than forty miles in length and built with the aid of not less than two townships in counties through which it runs it shall provide not less tha ntwo trains daily going each way to stop at all stations in such county.

Persons or corporations who are responsible for fires or for their spreading shall be liable for the cost of extinguishing them, according to a bill introduced by Senator Wood, where it is shown that such fires were due to their negligence or their non-compliance with any fire ordinance of a city or such law of a state. The bond of city judges, city comptroller, city attorney, members of the board of public works, commissioners of the board of public safety and the chief of police in cities of the third class is named at $1,000 in Senator Reser's bill.

A city or town annexing territory, Senator McCormick's bill provides, shall be liable for the proportion of the unpaid outstanding indebtedness of the civil township that the assessed value of property in such annexed territory is to the total valuation of all property in such township.

Sschool property that has become abandoned in cities of the fifth class may be utilized by the city for the use of public parks, with the consent of the school authorities, Senator Fleming's bill provides.

A caucus of the democratic members of the senate was announced for this afternoon. The Stotsenburg constitutional amendments will be considered at this meeting.

communication. While the incident was discussed with interest in official and diplomatic quarters there was no indication of what development it might take.

Naval officers recalled that the navy regulations permit a warship to fly another flag than its own, but specifically pvides that it must be hauled down al the ship's own flag must be hoisted bore a shot is fired. There are many indents in naval history where that hs been done, the latest being the Gerna sea rover Emden, which hoisted the Janese flag just before making a darin raid at Penang. Experts in naval pcedure recalled no case, however, vere a merchantman was involved.

It was recalled in naval circles here day that when Captain Glass, cominding the cruiser Charleston, on his ty to the Philippines with a convoy troops, stopped and captured Guam, ordered the Japanese flag to be flown his flagship and on the ships of his otilla. He signalled this message to he steamers Australia, Pending and ydney merchant ships under charter to he government and in use as troop ships. "Passing signal station at Guam Charleston will hoist Japanese colors; other vessels same or none."

The deception was aided by the fact that the Charleston was similar in appearance to the Japanese cruiser Naniwa.

JUDGE YAPLE IS NOT IN A WILD SCRAMBLE

Judge Carl Yaple, of the Allen county superior court, is not in any scramble for appointment to the vacancy on the bench of the Indiana appellate court occasioned by the death of Judge Frank M. Powers and is merely a receptive candidate should Governor Ralston care to consider him. Judge Yaple stated Monday that, like any ambitious lawyer and jurist, he would regard the appointment as a splendid company and would accept, but that he was not in any sense working for it. Many of Judge Yaple's friends in the Twelfth district, however, have taken matters into their hands so far as to telegraph Governor Ralston urging consideration of Judge Yaple's name.

nine years. It was fully insured and at County Superintendent D. O. McComb's office the loss is estimated at $4,000, taking into consideration that there will be no salvage as the walls are not strong enough to rebuild upon.

Roof Falls In.

As the people summoned by the alarm stood watching the fire a short time after the building had been vacated, the roof crashed in and until the flames devoured everything in sight the interior was a roaring furnace.

Estimates and plans will immediately be secured for a new school in the district and it is estimated that $8,000 will be expended, as it will be as near modern in its appointments as it is possible to make a school outside the city.

LAKESIDE CELLARS EMPTIED.

Open Sewer Valve Found to Be Cause of Influx of Water.

The new sewer pumps in Lakeside are performing admirably and the cellars whose owners complained of an influx of water have been drained. So well are the pumps working that they have to be closed down at intervals to permit sufficient accumulation of water to feed them. The trouble was found to be that instead of closing the valve of the Morton street sewer last week it had been turned the wrong way and opened to its capacity. The consequence was that the tide in the Maumee river was backing into the Lakeside sewers. The condition was found by Councilman Jacob Agne, who started on an investigation of his own. When the valve had been properly closed the water was taken out by the pumps and the cellar flooding ceased.

EXTRA SESSION IF SENATE HOLDS OUT

Congestion Must Clear Up to Avoid It, is Now the Belief.

Washington, Feb. 8.—President Wilson told callers today he was making every effort to avoid an extra session of congress. To Representative Borland, of the Missouri delegation, who asked him to speak in Kansas City on his contemplated trip to San Francisco in March, the president said he wanted to prevent the necessity for calling an extra session, but had not finally determined on his course.

Senator Williams told the president he favored an extra session if the shipping bill were defeated through a filibuster, while other senators opposed an extra session for any purpose.

Speaker Clark, Representative Underwood and Democratic Leader-elect Kitchen, at a conference today, over the legislative situation, agreed that if the congestion in the senate continues a week an extra session was virtually certain. They estimated that the ship bill could pass by a majority of 15 to 20 votes in the house under a special rule, with probably two or three days of debate.

Pink and white were the colors of the decoration, the nut baskets and candies and the lively birthday cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gilmartin, of West Wayne street, were given a surprise on Friday evening by the members of a card club to which they belong. The day selected was because that was the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gilmartin. The company was invited by Catherine and Angela Gilmartin, the small daughters of the family, and they planned and executed their plans with as much success as older people might have done.

Seven years old on Saturday was the occasion for a birthday party in honor of Helen Buck on Saturday. The party was at the home of Miss Helen, 1022 St. Mary's avenue. Although a little early it was a valentine party and beautiful things in red from red ribbons and paper hearts to the candles on the birthday cake were in that color. Peanut dolls dressed in red, paper caps from "snappers," heart shaped cakes with red cherry trimmings and numerous other things that children like all contributed to the good time.

A novelty feature at the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Jones, of Hoagland avenue, on Saturday evening in honor of their guest, Mrs. Brooks, of Greenfield, Mass., and also in celebration of the thirteenth anniversary of their own wedding, was the progression between courses from one table to another of the six laid. There were courses for the dinner so that during its progression everyone had an opportunity to sit at the table with the hosts of the evening. The tables were decorated with carnations and narcissus. After dinner bridge was enjoyed. The fact of the anniversary day was not mentioned by the hostess when invitations were issued, but the secret leaked out and when the guests arrived they bore some sort of a pretty or valuable souvenir of the occasion.

Ted Beeks Erick, jr., was four years old on Saturday and his grandmother, Mrs. Beeks Erick, of Brackenridge street, gave a beautiful party in Ted's honor in the afternoon. Among the games for the good time was feeding a leaf of lettuce to Peter Rabbit. Music and other games helped along the fun with Ted's mother, Mrs. Gray Erick, and Miss Marjorie Erick and Miss Helen Watt assisting. A lovely table to look at at supper time had a plenty of good things to eat. Festoons of red hearts hung from the chandelier to the corners of the table, where candles, hooded in red, cast a pretty glow on the table. A birthday cake was an indication of the sweet things there were. A fish pond held gifts for the guests. The children present were Martha and Jane McBride, Elizabeth and Emma Averill, Marjorie Reed, Mary Louise Metzner, James Wolf, Walter McComb, Wayne Parnam, Buster Walter, James Heit, John Malay, Peter Certia and Marguerite Leighty, of St. Joe.

N.Y. Stage Letter by Norman

O. P. HEGGIE AS ANDROCLES AND PHIL DWYER AS THE LION.

New York, Feb. 8.—The lion is by far the most interesting character in Bernard Shaw's latest play, "Androcles and the Lion," produced at Wallack's theatre by Granville Barker, and acted by an excellent English company.

The lion never says a word. Therein lies his great charm. The other characters have lines. These lines, in the main, tend to bring great confusion to the mind of the hearer. This unfortunate person tries to figure out what Shaw is driving at. In some of Shaw's plays, this is possible, some of the time.

But in "Androcles and the Lion" there arises again the dark suspicion, always held by some cynics regarding Shaw, that he isn't driving at anything, and that at the bottom of each deep pool of persiflage there is nothing to be found but a sinister Shavian chuckle.

To the auditor who does not trouble his head over the matter of what Shaw means, but merely watches what his characters do, a most entertaining play is unfolded. That it bewildered, baffled and shocked London and Berlin was merely because London and Berlin chose to be bewildered, baffled and shocked. New York is amused, and properly so.

The story concerns three Christian martyrs condemned to perish in the Roman arena. One of them, Ferrovius, a giant, forgets his Christian meekness and kills six gladiators when they set upon him. The emperor pardons him and appoints him to the Praetorian guard. His sister, Lavinia, has, by her physical charms, won the heart of a captain in Caesar's army, and she, too, is pardoned.

The third, Androcles, offered to a hungry lion, is recognized by the lion as the person who once pulled a thorn from his paw. Which being the case, the lion not only foregoes his meal, but joyously embraces Androcles, who, too, is pardoned by the emperor. The only Christian who suffers martyrdom is one who tries to recant, but dashes through the wrong door and is devoured.

And there you are. "Write your own ticket."

Barker has given the play the simplified and beautiful settings which are now revolutionizing the European stage. They are wonderfully effective.

AT THE TEMPLE.

The Temple has "The empters" this week. That's enough to tell readers that are familiar with burlesque but for the information of others it might be stated that "he Tempters" have Max Fields, Charlie Baker and Charlie Cole doing the comedy roles, Ruth Everett, Alice Gibson and a bevy of other young women in the leading feminine roles. These classy artists are seen in two hugely funny burlettas, "Married for a Day" and "Circus Life," both of them jammed to the guards with funny comedy talk, rattling good song numbers and delightfully entertaining dance features. Mlle Faustina, a ballet dancer, is grace incarnate and her specialty number will be greeted with storms of applause. This young woman looks like a second pavlowa. The production goes with a rush and a bang that is contagious, carrying the audience right along in the current of fun. It is by far the best burlesque that even the Temple has staged yet.

AT THE NEW PALACE

The New Palace opened its third big Keith week this afternoon with another bill of surpassing merit, one with a wealth of features that presages some royal entertainment. Willard Sims and his company are presenting the roaringly funny comedy sketch "Flinder's Furnished Flat," the act that has been dubbed the funniest in vaudeville and the same act in which the same company made a tour of Germany, Austria and France that was terminated abruptly by the outbreak of the war.

A touch of grand opera will be brought to the New Palace by the Dillon Shallard Famous Opera trio, consisting of Mr. Shallard and two other former grand opera vocalists, who will sing selections from the favorite grand operas.

AT THE COLONIAL

"SHORE ACRES" ENDS TODAY.

With Charles A. Stevenson, that brilliant character actor, in the title role, Shubert and Brady have made a most noteworthy adaptation of James A. Hearn's beautiful drama of New England and seashore life, "Shore Acres," and in five reels of interesting motion pictures have visualized in faultless manner this beloved old story.

AT THE LYRIC.

The Lyric, respendent in its new dress, with the most unique stage setting to be found in any picture house in the middle west, today and tomorrow is presenting the great labor play, "Money." This production was filmed with a view to preaching a sermon on the quarrel between capital and labor and preaching it in an entertaining and therefore powerful manner. Replete with thrilling scenes and with a care and attention to detail marking the entire production, "Money" tells its story convincingly and sends its appeal across the footlights with force. The play is given in five acts.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

In this day of vulgarity, claptrap and far-fetched entertainment, it is a pleasure to call the attention of our theatergoers to "A Pair of Sixes," the most phenomenally successful farce ever presented in any country during any age. Maybe the rut into which our writers of farce have fallen or maybe the commercialism of the dramatic profession makes this farce more conspicuous—whatever the reason, "A Pair of Sixes" has enjoyed the distinction of making the longest run recorded in New York, to the credit of farcical entertainment. It will be presented at the Majestic tonight.

AT THE EMPRESS.

The ladies who attended the matinee at the Empress this afternoon were the happy recipients of some beautiful souvenirs and also saw a show of great merit. Opening with the appearance of the Davids, who are in a class by themselves as jugglers and slack wire walkers, the show for the first half of the week is of the sort that everybody talks about and long remembers. Sheridan and Williams have a fine line of songs, chatter and jokes. Eddie Raye, with his splendid company, is seen in that great farce comedy offering, "The Cheater." Elliott and Mullin, as "Two Shades of Black," sing and joke and register an emphatic hit. The Fern Bigelow troupe of comedy acrobats please. The motion picures are great.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS LARGELY A MATTER OF CARE.

I think that this is because we wash our hands so much more than we do our faces. There is a natural oil that lubricates the skin and keeps it soft and pliable. If this oil is constantly washed away, then we must supply a manufactured emollient that will do the work of which we have robbed nature.

Very few girls take proper care of their hands. True, more of them nowadays than in our mother's time manicure their nails regularly, but after doing that many of them think all work is done so far as beautifying is concerned.

The hands should be rubbed with some good, cold cream every morning after the bath.

A woman with the most beautiful hands I know is over forty, with skin the texture and tint of youth. She has kept them beautiful by soaking them at least once a month in warm olive oil, rubbing them and washing them in the oil.

If, when you arise each morning, you go through a little exercise of opening and shutting your fingers, one at a time, slowly and tightly, you will find it will make your hands supple.

If you take good care of your hands, you need never worry about using them to work.

The only thing to remember is that, when you wash the oil out of them you must afterwards put some back again.

By Clarissa Chesley.

A lovely grape shade of velvet, or the putty color which is favorite of the season can be used to cover the hat which I am describing in these articles. Black velvet also could be used for the facing.

Start the work of covering by placing the corner of the velvet directly at the front inside the crown. The inside of the brim is fitted and then the velvet cut, leaving at least a half-inch margin to go over the edge.

After milliner's glue has been applied to the velvet and it is smoothed out on the brim, the edge of velvet is carefully turned over and whipped down.

A wire is inserted at the edge and the velvet turned over that. The edges of the inside and the outside are side are then brought together and sewed through and through with long stitches which slant across invisibly between the edges and short ones through the velvet on the outside. The velvet is slashed on the inside like the frame material and sewed down to the crown wires.

The crown which is a soft tam shape is made of a circle of velvet measuring 14 inches front to back and 13 inches across. This is turned under and gathered over a wire. It is then fastened to the brim.

The seam on the brim must be made on the low side of the hat. The velvet is turned under on each side where it meets for the seam. The edges are then brought together and sewmeet, and are slipstitched together.

The trimmings must be made and put on next and after that the lining made and sewed in. Directions for this work will be given in the following two lessons.

AT THE JEFFERSON.

MARY PICKFORD TRIUMPHS AGAIN

Beautiful Film-Play Adapted From the Famous Drama, "Mistress Nell."

Mary Pickford, more winsome and charming than ever, has come to the Jefferson and added to her already long list of personal screen triumphs by scoring a brilliant triumph in the title role of George Hazelton's beautiful historical drama, "Mistress Nell."

William Farnan Tomorrow in "The Gilded Fool."

Assisted by one of the most comprehensive casts ever presented in the same photo-play with an acknowledged star, William Farnum comes to the Jefferson tomorrow, playing the powerful role of Chauncey Short in Henry Guy Carlton's dramatic success, "The Gilded Fool."

One live minnow may be used as bait for an entire day's fishing by the inventions of a hook on which the minnow is held in a glass cage, safe from larger fish.

ALL EYES ON AUCTION MARKET FOR PLAYERS

New York, Feb. 8.—Reports that Roger Bresnahan, Charles Herzogg and Miller Huggins, three club managers, were on their way to the National league meeting here tomorrow promises to be overshadowed by an auction market for players.

Manager Bresnahan, according to reports, wants an infielder and an outfielder. Huggins and Herzogg, reports have it, are in the market for pitchers and fielders who are known as hitters. The chief business arranged for the consideration of the club owners includes proposals to rescind the twenty-one players limit rule and to abolish the March 1 training camp law and a decision about exempting the class AA clubs from draft, the adoption of a playing schedule for next season and a thorough discussion as to the probable dissolution of the national commission which is being advocated now.

There seems little doubt that the player limit rule recently adopted by the league will be rescinded. Also the restriction on training will probably be lifted, as the American league refused to place any ban on this expense. John K. Tener, president of the league, probably will be given the right to act with President Johnson of the American league in the question of exempting from draft all class AA league.

Adopting the schedule will be only a matter of form as the dates have already been arranged.

Grateful Patient Writes About St. Joseph's Hospital

Having had the privilege of seeing this large building, I want to say a few words in its praise, as many do not know on what a large scale it is conducted, or of the skill, labor and money required to make it the useful institution it is.

This hospital covers nearly a square, it is five stories high, has many nice porches and outer sleeping rooms, heated by an immense heating plant, at a cost of $0,000 or more, making the whole building warm and comfortable.

The many long halls are duplicated in design, white tiled walls and mosaic floors, and many bath rooms, some private, with bed rooms adjoining, hot water in abundance, electric lights and all the modern conveniences.

The first floor is given to offices, a sitting room and kitchenette, and bed rooms. This floor is for men only and they enjoy their cigars and tobacco to their heart's content.

The third floor is for ladies only and you see the feminine touch in all its surroundings—pretty bed rooms, with pictures and many home-like attractions. On all these floors is the kitchenette, or "diet" kitchen, with its many conveniences in the culinary art; also the inspection room, all in dazzling white tile, quiet and restful. The second floor is for both women and men, or for the family. Floor No. 4 has more nice bed rooms, maternity department and old ladies' department, and a few offices, sitting room, kitchenette, etc., etc.

Floor No. 5 is pretty much the same as floors Nos. 3 and 4, with the operating rooms, the X-Ray rooms and offices.

At meal hours you see great activity, dumb waiters going up and down, the sisters hurrying to and fro, carrying trays in countless numbers laden with appetizing food, and if you have not had your dinner or supper, you wish one of the trays belonged to you and if the patient is only a little sick, how you envy him or her! Here is a place where woman predominates. The sisters do all of the work, with a few exceptions, and these outside employes, many have called it home for years, and are loyal to the interests of the institution. They have their barber, shoemaker, electrician, plumber, ice and coal men and the man who does all the buying and their newsboy, who are useful in many ways. All work with zeal, unity, obedience, system and a general good will explains the harmony one sees everywhere.

The old ladies or "grandmas" have a fine corner sitting room on the fourth floor, cheerful and inviting, with easy chairs, pictures and books, and a good outlook from many windows. Dining room, two bed rooms also near, all making it home-like. Christmas eve the sisters arranged a Christmas tree, bright with candles many, and gifts—one given to each old lady, who seemed as pleased as a child might be. The sisters sang Christmas carols which added to the pleasure.

Among them was little Patrick, a boy of ten years, an inmate since his babyhood, both blind and paralyzed, cared for by these good sisters and having the best of care, yet you cannot see him without your heart aching for one so helpless as the future has for him—nothing! The sympathetic priest tried to find for the boy a home in the blind asylum, but was denied, as the child was blind and paralyzed both, a great misfortune, for no chance for learning to read, thus giving some relief to his never-ending night. A dear old lady has been here three years or more, entirely paralyzed, and helpless of course, but she is so patient and grateful for all kindness that she has endeared herself to all and her bell call is always gladly responded to. I could cite a number of charity instances that the good sisters care for. The sister superior in charge on each floor rules not only with great ability, but with tact, and a kind heart, for she knows that the "poor we have with us always."

Near grandma's" rooms comes the baby department, where the mothers are "boarders" for a time. The nursery is light and airy, with pretty cribs on all sides and babies galore!—some crying, some smiling, nurses in pretty caps hurrying to and fro, all seems hurry and bustle, for there is much to do. The operating room is one of much interest—'tis a blaze of light from the high ceiling to the floor. The white tiling much in evidence, as if in "bridal array," one party remarked. Everything is planned for expediency and comfort, as our city doctors all know and appreciate as well the skillful aid of a sister who is always on hand to assist in all operations. A sister presides over the X-Ray department and has the sole charge of this chamber of mysteries.

But we will go from the fifth floor to the cellar. Again in its winding ways and closets and large rooms we see the same white tiling and mosaic floor, kept with that cleanliness the sisters are so famous for. You find the big range in the center of a large kitchen and everything needed near. One sister at the head, directing the others—and oh, such good things as they can concoct! Three large fireless cookers and coffee urn, in which ten gallons per day are made (often more). The dough mixer and the ovens, from which many loaves of bread a day are baked, to feed the army of people in their care. You visit the store room, full to the ceiling with bags of flour, canned goods and fruit, all bought by the load. Closets on all sides, with heavy doors. Electric light comes and goes as if by magic at their opening and shutting. These closets are nicely divided for meats, milk, fruit, etc., but the ice plant is king, costing $7,000 or more, doing duty both winter and summer.

From the hospital farm they get all their milk and chickens, make their own butter, so golden, eighteen cows on said farm, must be contented cows (I read of), as the milk is so rich and nice. All their meat is bought on the hoof and they have them butchered, thus securing the best.

There is more of interest here. The laundry in particular, but space forbids. The chapel is located on Main street, with good Father Thomas in charge, entrance is under roof (from the old chapel entrance), quite a comfort in bad weather.

Seeing the many sisters, with bowed heads, and in this modest garb, is a picturesque sight one cannot but admire. Parties who remember the old Rockhill house (once so popular under "Mine Host" Rumsey and son), will see some of the old landmarks in the Main street side entrance—a part now used as a drug store and as the old chapel. If you go above you find one large dining room that was now divided into many compartments, but you recall the halcyon days; it was often used as a ball room, where the belles and beaux, alas, now no more, tripped the light fantastic and you wonder if they ever return to visit in ghostly form these scene of "Auld Lang Syne."

I had the privilege of seeing the manger scene, prepared every Christmas by the sisters. The Christ story is told in miniature in the old chapel, and is very realistic. You see in painting on the wall the shepherds watching their flocks by night, until you can almost fancy you hear the song, "Peace on Earth, Good-Will to Men." You see the sheep on all sides, the oxen and even the faithful shepherd dog, but in the manger the light faces on the infant Jesus, and near the adoring figures of Mary, Joseph and the shepherds all carefully arranged, and showed a world of work and taste, and done with loving hands, I felt assured. I learned that each hall here is presided over by a sister superior, head of many sisters in her division, and all under the mother superior, whose word is law. This is the mother house of Poor Handmaids of Christ, hence her home.

The aim of all hospitals is a most noble one, kind and immediate aid to the sick and helpless. May all prosper and unite in brotherly love, regardless of color and creed, a fitting name for all is the Good Samaritan, as all should be done in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

"He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things, both great and small;
For the dear Lord, who is above,
He made and loveth all."

Gauge in Maumee River Monday Shows That Water Is Going Down.

The gauge in the Maumee river showed a stage of 15.1 feet at 7 o'clock Monday morning, while at the same hour Sunday the gauge showed a stage of 15.7 feet. The water is slowly receding. Forecaster Palmer predicts warmer weather for Tuesday.

The following sign has been posted in conspicuous places in street cars: "Please do not get on car with lighted cigarette or pipe. Conductors are required to enforce this rule."

Forty applications have been made at the postoffice for positions, but not a single application for help. The applications are forwarded from Fort Wayne to Chicago.

Tia Juana, Mexico, Feb. 5.—Hundreds of Americans, innocent sight-seers mostly, who have come to this garish little Mexican town, just across the international line from San Diego, Cal., within the past few weeks call it, with reason, "the hell-hole of the continent."

They have gone back to the Panama-California exposition city wiser and sadder individuals.

Some bear the blackpack's brand upon their heads. Many have known the sickening blackness of knockout drops. They have been robbed of whatever gold and valuables they carried, either at the point of a gun in some foul rendezvous of crooks or by the manipulations of sure-thing gamblers, aided by women harpies.

Professional gamblers, thugs, confidence men and bunco steerers from all parts of the United States have made it their stamping ground for the purpose of fleecing San Diego fair visitors during 1915.

Almost without exception these outlaws are American renegrades, not Mexicans. They have gathered like flocking vultures where the picking promises to be good and where laws are lax.

Roulette, faro, poker, slot machines, the shell game, fake bull-ring fights, and the wiles of painted women—these are some of the means the allied underworld forces of Tia Juana employ in fleecing unsuspecting American men and women who come here, across the line, "to see Mexico."

Recently a prominent Los Angeles physician reported that he had been stripped of all his money and valuables by the "bull-ring" ruse, engineered by a quartette of crooks. Two men, posing as fellow tourists, lured him to the old arena where two confederates held up the three at the point of revolvers. The highwaymen then split the loot four ways.

Tia Juana's American renegrades maintain shrewd cappers at some of the San Diego hotels, who contrive to meet "lives ones" in quest of "a little spice," and steer them down here to the tender mercies of the hawks. Other bunco-steerers work on the "rubber-neck" wagons, plying from San Diego, posing as tourists before the intended victims.

Some of the smoothest of these cappers are women—of the type calculated to strike up acquaintanceship with men who want to go back home and brag about having had a romance with a charming senorita.

The "senoritas," with carmine lips and eyes dusked to taste, are not Mexicans or girls of Castile. They are well known, many of them, to the police of Chicago, New York, New Orleans or San Francisco. And the "romance" they strike up with the innocents abroad would hardly bear telling about back home, even if the victims were so inclined after having been robbed and perhaps beaten up in some vile hole whence they were lured by pretty bait in petticoats.

Some of these women work among their own sex among the tourists, coaxing them into the gambling joints of this Mexican Monte Carlo with a "tip" that there is easy money to be made at roulette—"and how exciting to tell your friends of your adventures in Mexico!"

It is this hanker of men and women away from their accustomed environment for spicy adventure, as well as the appeal to the gambling lust, that the harpies of Tia Juana have converted to their own sure-thing profit.

And it is just this greed for easy money "by luck" on the part of prospective victims which makes Tia Juana continue to flourish as "the wickedest place on the continent," as it is the gullibility of seekers after clandestine romance which accounts for the "senorita's" part in the fleecing.

NATIONALS PUT UP AN ARTISTIC GAME

Professionals Know How to Play and Will Show Saints—Other Games.

One thing in basket ball is certain.

If the players on the St. Paul aggregation keep their eyes open and their wits working full time they will learn a lot of basket ball Tuesday night when they play the New York Nationals.

This club puts up an artistic article of basket shooting and floor working and none of the independent or college teams has any hope of beating it because it is selected for show purposes and therefore material of the best obtainable has been selected.

Games between evenly matched teams are always interesting whether the players are expert or not and while Fort Wayne and the surrounding towns boast of some dandy clubs they have nothing like this National aggregation. The club works like a well oiled machine and persons interested in basket ball will be highly entertained.

However, the Saints are not there just to look on. They practiced up for the game and are going into the fracas prepared to give the Nationals the best they have in stock.

Saint Mary's and Concordia.

On Wednesday night a disturbance that has been brewing for some time will culminate in a battle between the Concordia five and St. Mary's Athletics.

In the first setto between these organizations the collegians nosed out a victory by a spectacular finish and the Saints are prepared to resist a rush of this kind and if they obtain an advantage in the early stages they will devote themselves to the task of holding it.

On the other hand the Concordia troop does not expect to take any chances. It will go after St. Mary's from the drop of the hat and will not depend upon a warm finish to win the game. Both clubs are said to be in form and the rivalry existing between them is certain to bring about some good basket ball.

Girls Booked With Bluffton.

Bluffton's high school girls' team will be here on Friday night and will play the local high school girls at the Smart gym. The boys are without a game and may play in the preliminary if a club can be booked for the occasion.

BY JACK JUNGMEYER.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 8.—The fighting rivalry between two great speed kings which is expected to reach its climax in the Vanderbilt cup race at the exposition here February 22, also promises to make this the last as well as the most spectacular of the contests for this coveted trophy.

De Palma and Grant!

Both have twice won the $5,000 cup. Either one needs win it but once more to retain it permanently.

Ralph De Palma was among the first to file entry. Harry Grant has unofficially announced that he would come in, as have more than 25 other famous mahouts of America and Europe.

De Palma is the logical favorite. Not only has he two Vanderbilt events and one second prize to his credit, but he also won third in the 1911 Savannah Grand Prix and has the distinction of being the first man to cover the entire Vanderbilt course without a stop.

His best average speed, made at Santa Monica, Cal., last year, was 75.05 miles per hour. In 1913 at Milwaukee, where he also won, he averaged 69.97 miles.

His top speed was an average of 65.18 miles an hour.

There is therefore, a difference of about 10 miles an hour average in favor of De Palma over his speedy rival's best time.

To prevent the troph for which scores of intrepid mahouts have risked their lives since 1904 from passing beyond the realm of competition, the 25 or 30 other contestants may be expected to force the going to an even more desperate pace this year.

The situation has raised interest to the most intense pitch throughout the sporting world, and a crowd of at least 200,000 is expected to witness what may very likely be the last of the present Vanderbilt cup races. The grandstand alone will seat 55,000.

Because of the shortness of the exposition course and the sharp turns necessitated by the big fair palaces that bound part of the speedway, the element of danger to the drivers has been greatly magnified.

Heretofore the shortest Vanderbilt cup course has been about eight miles to the lap; here it is less than four, necessitating twice as many turns. The 300-mile race will be completed in 75 loops.

With an average of three minutes to the loop, the racers will be in view of the vast audience practically all the time.

Either De Palma's or Grant's winning of this contest will call for the donation of a new cup or the termination of this blue-ribbon event of the auto world.

Already this contingency has been anticipated and W. L. Houghson, chairman of the exposition racing committee, has sounded out W. K. Vanderbilt jr. as to his intentions. A new trophy will in all likelihood be donated.

The present $5,000 gold cup was tendered by Vanderbilt in 1904, and was first won by George Heath at Long Island with an average speed of 52.2 miles per hour.

The Grand Prix race will be run over the exposition course on Feb. 27, just five days after the Vanderbilt. All entrants are listed for both events.

YOUNGSTOWN LINED UP BY PRESIDENT

Central League Will Have Club There According to Annoucement.

Youngstown, O., Feb. 8.—Youngstown is going to have Central league baseball this summer, according to an announcement made by President Louis Heilbroner and George O'Neil, owner of the Erie franchise. These gentlemen made a complete canvass of some of the representative business men and they claim there will be plenty of support for the club. A temporary organization will be formed within a few days, at which time those connected with the proposition will hold an election and decide upon an executive.

Heilbroner and O'Neil have gone to their home. They will no doubt return here in a few days to straighten out some matter pertaining to the local situation, such as closing for Wright field. In this connection, O'Neil expects to meet Paul Powers in Pittsburg, to formally close the deal for the lease.

President Heilbroner announced that he would complete negotiations in Wheeling within a few days. According to the promoters the outlook is bright and a classy team is expected here. Curley Blount will be made manager of the local team.

At the meeting Heilbroner declared the Central league would open on April 21, and would no doubt close one week before Labor day, or on September 1 to be exact. The schedule has not been adopted as yet but this will be done at a meeting of the magnates planned for the latter part of this month.

MATCHED WITH MURPHY.

Hal Stewart will have a real tryout on Feb. 26 at Toledo, when he takes on Harlem Tommy Murphy, the best of the second string lightweights in the country. Manager George Biemer has arranged the match and Stewart is preparing himself for the go. Negotiations have been opened with Freddie Welsh for a match here and Stewart has been picked to oppose him.

COOMBS SAYS HE'S COMING BACK SURE

Declines to Believe That He's Through and is Working Hard.

Jack Coombs, former mainstay of Connie Mack's world championship pitching staff, refuses to believe that he is through. Coombs, who has signed to pitch for the Brooklyn Nationals this year, is spending the winter in conditioning himself for the diamond campaign. He declares that he will report in ship shape.

Coombs came from Colby college, joining the Athletics in 1906. He gained fame as a pro at the very beginning of his career by pitching the longest major league game on record. It was a 24-inning contest and he beat the Red Sox, 4 to 1.

In 1910 he won 31 out of 40 games and created a new American league shutout record. He also pitched 53 consecutive scoreless innings, a record which Walter Johnson beat in 1913, when he pitched 56 innings without a run being tagged on him. To complete a fine season, Jack won three games against the Cubs in the 1910 world's series.

Coombs continued a marvel of the twirler's art until the 1911 world's series when he suffered a severe injury. He had beaten the Giants early in the series, and had the fifth game almost won, the score being 3 to 0, and the Giants had made only two hits up to the seventh inning, when something snapped in Jack's anatomy. The score was tied on Coombs in the ninth inning and the Giants won on Plank in the tenth.

WORKING OUT A NEW SCHEDULE OF RATES

A new schedule of rates for the city light and power works is under consideration by Mayor Hosey and the board of works and it contemplates a further reduction. Secretary-Manager John Wessel and Superintendent Frank Dix have framed a tentative schedule that is now undergoing a careful examination. For some time a further reduction of rates has been contemplated and the schedule has been prepared with that object. Just what the reduction will be and when it is likely to become effective the mayor and board are not prepared to say.

The board, pursuant to request of the lighting department, will before long have plans prepared and advertisement made for bids to furnish the lighting department with a new 800 horse-power high pressure boiler to take the place of two 300 horse-power boilers. It is designed to have this installed by some time early in the fall.

FOUND GUILTY OF UNNATURAL CRIME

Jonas Fry, a teamster aged 40 years, was found guilty, Monday afternoon, in the circuit court of a shocking and unnatural crime against his daughter, Margaret Fry, aged 15. The trial was one of the most revolting ever heard in the circuit court and there was a suffocating mob of men of all ages there to listen to the testimony. It was shown that on Christmas eve Fry, after plying his daughter with whisky until she was helplessly drunk, subjected her to abuse of a description that is not printable. In a brief summary of the evidence the court declared there was no doubt of Fry's guilt and so entered judgment. P. B. Colerick, attorney for Fry, made a motion for a new trial and sentence was thereupon deferred until Wednesday. The mother of Fry's children is dead. The family had been living in terrible squalor in the old "Beehive" on West Superior street prior to Fry's arrest.

WANT A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

A petition signed by Trustee Leonard Stolte and four other citizens of Washington township requests the board of county commissioners to appoint Theodore Bates a justice of the peace for that township. The extension of the Wayne township boundaries to include that portion of Washington township included within the boundaries of the city of Fort Wayne brought Justice of the Peace Rayhouser into Wayne township and left Washington shy on courts of justice. The citizens want a court and the commissioners have the petition under advisement.

In the circuit court Judge Eggman ordered Charles Donnelly to pay $10 a month to the support of his child and released him on his own recognizance after warning him that if he was again brought before the court for neglect he probably would be sent to the penitentiary.

Local Nickel Plate officials were shocked yesterday by news of the death of Mrs. C. L. Titus at Conneaut, Ohio, Saturday. She was the wife of Charles L. Titus, assistant to the superintendent of the Eastern division of the Nickel Plate, former trainmaster of the Chicago division, with headquarters in Fort Wayne. Besides the husband, Mrs. Titus is survived by a son, who is assistant manager of the Goodrich Company, of New York. The funeral will be held at Conneaut at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and will be attended by officials and railway men from many of the cities on the line of the Nickel Plate. Mr. and Mrs. Titus lived here a year, having quarters at an apartment house on East Main street. They moved to Conneaut in the latter part of November, 1913, when Mr. Titus was promoted to his present position.

EDUCATING APPRENTICES.

Pennsylvania Maintains Four Schools for the Purpose.

The Pennsylvania railroad believes in brains. It has been making investments in brains since the company's charter was granted in 1846. Five years ago it made another such investment in the brains of its youngest shopmen through the opening of an apprentice school at the Altoona, Pa., shops. Thirty pupils were enrolled then.

Today the company is sending 300 young men to school and paying them for the time they spend there. Three branch schools have been opened, and so great has been the success of the whole experiment that plans are now under way to extend the school work to all of the shops on the eastern lines of the Pennsylvania system where apprentices may be employed.

Thus far 151 apprentices have completed the full three-year course and have been graduated from the schools. Approximately 60 more will be added to this number by the class going out this year.

The school courses supplement the trade instruction which all apprentices in the shop receive. The teaching is intended to add to the efficiency of the trained hand and eye by providing a trained mind.

The three branch schools which have been established since the formation of the original class are at Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Wilmington, Del. Approximately one-third of the apprentice pupils attend the branches, while two-thirds are at the main school at Altoona, where a special building has been erected and equipped.

All shop apprentices in the four cities mentioned are required to attend as special apprentices. The latter are young men who have completed technical college courses and who are receiving experience to train them for official positions.

The shop schools are intended for those apprentices who have had the advantage of college training, and these form a large majority of the whole. The subjects taught cover the essential principles required in trade work, and all of the teaching is planned with a severely practical purpose in view, namely, to impart the knowledge that can be profitably utilized by a highly skilled workman. No more theory is taught the apprentice than is necessary for intelligent understanding.

The studies of the shop school apprentice include, in general, mathematics, mechanics and drawing, with as much of English and elementary science as is warranted in schools whose primary object is specific trade education.

WABASH SECTION FOREMEN

Nearly every section foreman on the Peru division of the Wabash attended two meetings at the Star theater hall yesterday morning and afternoon, called for the discussion of the various methods of building and maintaining the tracks with a view of getting at the best and putting it in practical use. Charles Palmer, road supervisor, presided at the meeting and read a paper on "A Model Section and How to Keep It." There were other speakers, among them J. B. Carr, chief clerk to Division Engineer W. S. Danes, who talked on making reports and gave a number of statistics to show the cost of the upkeep of a mile of track. Questions were asked and discussed concerning the maintenance of track, the cost of putting in a new and improved type of switch and other matters. Road Supervisor Palmer said that it was the intention to hold these meetings every month or six weeks and that the next one will be at Montpelier. One of the men in attendance yesterday was Chris Fosler, for many years section foreman of the Fort Wayne district, but now at White House. He took advantage of the opportunity to meet a number of his old associates.

WAS ON OPERATING TABLE

C. A. Contant Passed Through Surgical Operation.

A telegram from Mrs. C. A. Contant, who is with her husband at the Mayo sanitarium in Rochester, Minn., states that Mr. Contant passed through a surgical operation Friday afternoon, which the surgeons regards as very successful. The message did not state the character of the disease with which Mr. Contant is afflicted, but merely stat[illegible] that the operation was successful [illegible] the patient doing as well as could be expected. Mrs. Contant and son, Fireman Henry F. Contant, accompanied Mr. Contant to Rochester and will remain there until he is ready to come home.

CO-OPERATIVE PLAN IS A GO.

E. S. Phillips, of the Indiana Co-Operative store, of Indianapolis, who has been here two or three weeks in the interest of a proposed store in this city, and the men who have assisted him, are of the opinion that the project will be carried to a successful end. Mr. Phillips has visited all of the unions and says that nearly all have subscribed to the store fund and that a number of individual members have taken stock. The machinists, who, on account of other business, were unable to take up the store proposition last Monday night, will discuss it at a special meeting in the Aldine hall Tuesday night.

BOWSER EFFICIENCY CLUB.

President E. J. Little, of the Bowser Efficiency club, announces two interesting features for the meeting tomorrow night. Dr. C. G. Beall will speak on "Health" and Mission Superintendent J. A. Nipper will speak on "The Practical Side of Mission Work." This will be the regular semi-monthly meeting.

ADDS PRODUCT TO OUTPUT.

Hereafter clothes pressing machines will be manufactured at the plant of the Engineering company. The press is operated by gas or steam and gas and is the latest invention in the dry cleaning line out. President Bengs says some addition to the shop will be made on account of this additional product.

GOING EAST ON BUSINESS

Supt. W. M. Wardrop, of the Pennsylvania, will leave tonight for Pittsburgh and tomorrow attend to some railway business. Mr. Wardrop expects to go to Philadelphia to see Billy Sunday, the evangelist, who is conducting meetings in that city, before he returns home. They have been warm friends for a number of years.

TOO FAST FOR PRESIDENT.

B. F. Horner Relates Story of Railroad Experience.

B. F. Horner, whose signature and title of general passenger agent appears on every ticket of the Nickel Plate, is a real veteran of the railroad world. As young man, Mr. Horner enlisted in a northern regiment at the outbreak of the civil war, fought the four years of conflict and at the close of the war went into the railroad business, then comparatively in its infancy. His first position of importance was as a conductor on the old Pere Marquette.

One of his favorite stories tell of an experience while in the employ of that road. "It was a rough road then, the old P. M.," says Mr. Horner. "Even some railroads had to serve as the butt of vaudeville jokes. It used to convulse audiences to see a comedian come out on the stage with a coffin strapped on his back and hear him explain he was 'going traveling on the Pere Marquette and aimed to save the undertaker some trouble.'

"But the traveling public hadn't been educated as yet to finely ballasted roadbeds and all-steel rolling stock and no one objected very strenuously.

"I had one of the 'crack' runs, a 'first-class' train that frequently was honored by carrying high officials of the road. One day the word went out that the president of the company himself, was to go down the line on my run. The P. M., it appears, was bidding on the purchase of a small branch line and the president was to put in the bid. It was imperative that he reach his destination on time.

"The 'old man's' private car was coupled to my train and we started out. Things began to go wrong. The engine was suffering from some ailment and seemed just to limp along. The train, with the president's car attached, was heavy. Still we did our best and managed to attain a speed of as much as thirty miles an hour.

"After an hour or so of running, I was summoned to the president's car.

"'You know,' he said, 'I'm in a hurry. Don't you suppose you can run a little faster?'

"I promised to do my best and went up to the engine for a consultation with the engineer. Together, we doctored up the old 'teapot' until she was clipping off the rail-joints at about forty-five miles an hour.

"But when I went back through the train, my coaches were behaving like ships at sea. The passengers, for the most part, were hanging to the seat-arms for dear life, with white, set faces.

"Then came another summons from the president's car and I picked my way back to the rear end.

"The 'old man's' car presented a startling appearance. Chairs were overturned and one of the chandeliers lay on the floor. The president himself was propped against the side, clinging to a window frame.

"'Say,' he roared, "go up front and choke that fellow down! This is an important trip, but I don't think it's so d——d important as all this.'"

W. A. Barrett, salesman for the Bass Foundry and Machine company, left this morning on a business trip to several Indiana cities.

Mrs. Thomas Gorman, of 512 Masterson avenue, wife of a Pennsylvania shopman, was taken home from St. Joseph hospital today. Mrs. Gorman was operated upon a week or more ago at St. Joseph hospital and is rapidly regaining complete health.

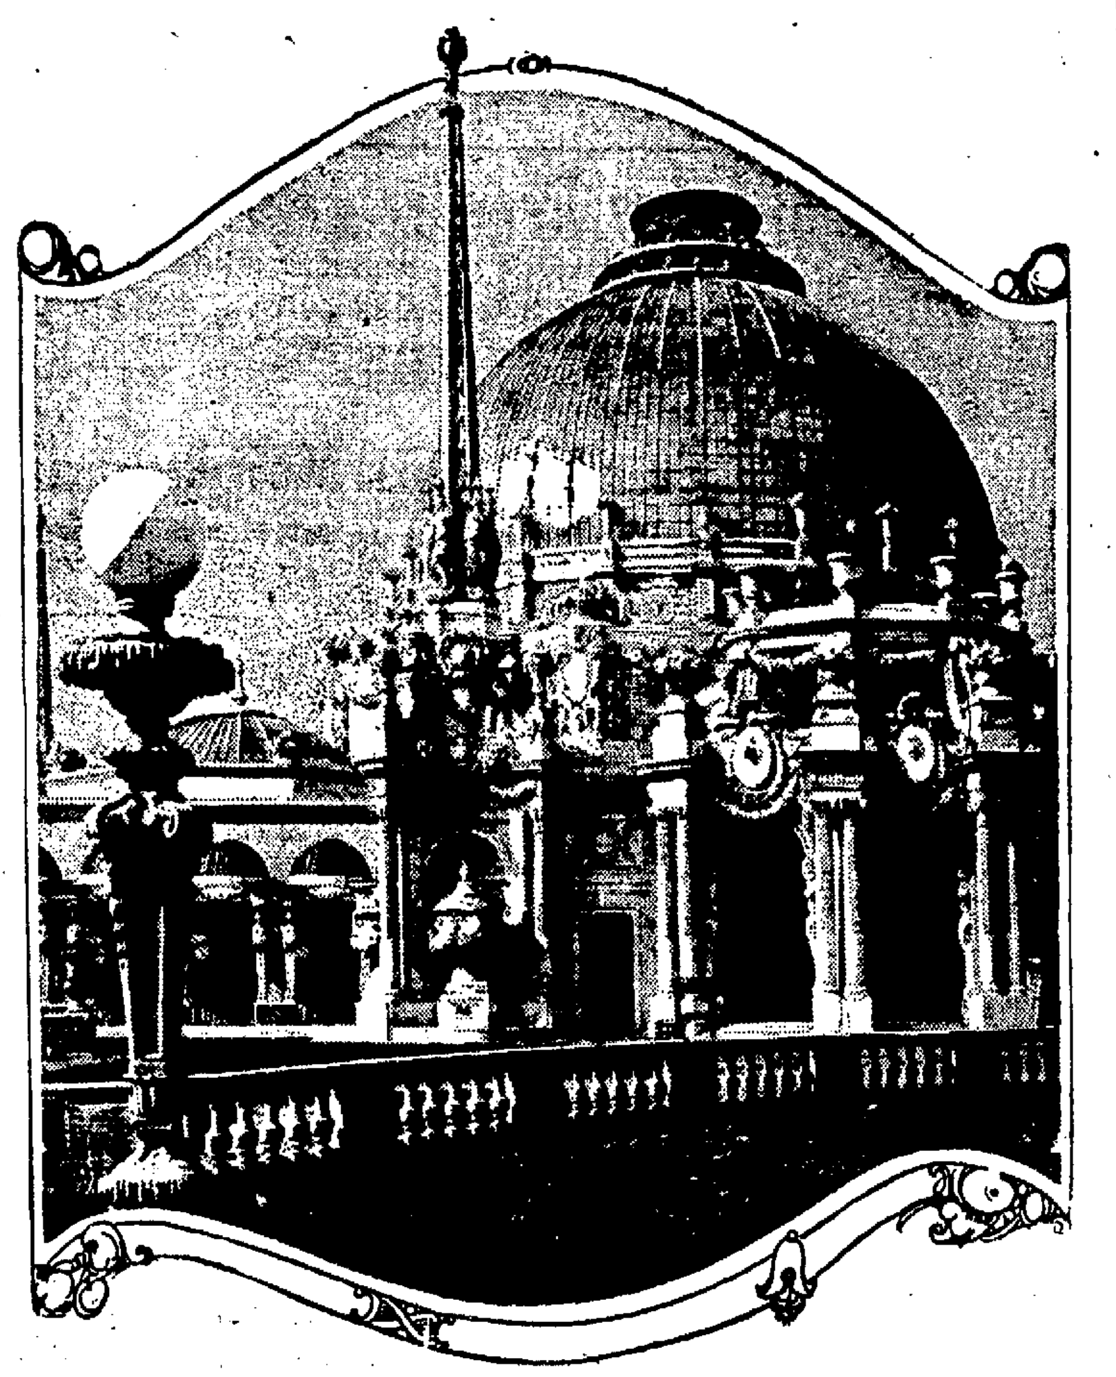
Ellis Deahl, who had been visiting his relatives in this city, left for Cleveland yesterday. He is secretary to R. W. Mitchener, superintendent of transportation, at present. For several years he was employed in the trainmasters' offices in this city.

J. J. Stephens and A. B. Conn, Nickel Plate conductors, who had been sick a week, reported for work this morning. Conductors W. O. Miller, C. F. Herdwidge and Harry Crance, who had been off duty looking after private matters, also reported for work today.

District Passenger Agent F. P. Parnin, of the Nickel Plate, says the sentiment is almost unanimously in favor of the proposed passenger rate increase in his territory. He has just completed a trip in the interest of the movement and addressed a meeting called for the discussion of the proposed legislative move.

C. Henry, county agent, will return Monday evening from Ohio, where he and Mrs. Henry buried their three-weeks old baby girl.

SEEING A $50,000,000 FAIR FOR $3 A DAY.



The magnificent palace of horticulture, one of the crowning architectural beauties of the Panama-Pacific fair, surpassed only by the beauties of the plants and flowers it shelters.

That's what the Panama-Pacific exposition, opening here on February 20, 1915, has kept constantly in mind. Hotels, restaurants, railway and steamship companies have co-operated in the same spirit.

This $50,000,000 exposition can be fully enjoyed at a minimum of $21 a week, or $3 a day, after the visitor has reached San Francisco. This schedule has been worked out by the exposition people with the following items:

Meals, per day, $1; lodging, per night, 50 cents; admission to grounds, 50 cents; amusements, etc., $1.00; total, per day, $3.

Sample rates from Mississippi river points are $57.50 for the round trip, with stop-overs; from Rocky mountain points, $45; Omaha, Kansas City and points in that zone, $50.

Opportunity to see the wonder spots of the United States has never before been so conveniently linked up with a great national event.

Prairie lands still dotted with buffalo wallows and ranged by great bands of cattle, cowboy tended; Colorado's titanic canyons and peaks; Yellowstone park; the Grand canyon in Arizona; the painted deserts of New Mexico, home of the Navajos and Zuni Indians; the great Salt Lake; Glacier national park in Montana; the orange groves of southern California, and Lake Tahoe and the redwood forests in the north—these are but a few of the hints in an itinery of "seeing America first" in connection with the 1915 fair.

The Panama-Pacific tourist will march with history—the conquest of a continent—on his swift westward way. And at the end of the trail here he will find all the sweat and romance that went into the winning of the west displayed and symbolized in a fair that marks the opening of the new commercial trail into the Orient.

Summed up, the Panama-Pacific exposition in the splendor of its palaces and gardens, the character of its myriad displays, the urge toward a broader and better and more efficient national life, its colorful pageantry, its congresses and sports events, stands as a great public university for the people of the United States during 1915.

LANE WILL BE GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Not Believed He Has Handed in Formal Resignation as Reported.

"If Prof. Charles R. Lane has handed his resignation in, I know nothing of it and am inclined to doubt it," declared E. W. Cook, a member of the school board Monday morning.

Some days ago Prof. Lane called upon Superintendent J. N. Study, it is understood, and told him that he did not seem to improve. Superintendent Study consulted with members of the school board and that seems to be about all there is to the resignation story. Probably some action will be taken at the meeting of the school board Monday evening. It is believed Prof. Lane will be given a leave of absence on full salary.

Prof. Lane has served as principal of the Fort Wayne high school for nearly forty years. For some time he has been in poor health and previous to the holidays spent several weeks in a sanitarium. Since his return he has shown little improvement.

NEEDED CONFIDENCE MUCH MORE THAN CASH

Washington, Feb. 8.—The cotton pool, like the gold exchange pool, has lapsed without being used. It was a psychological remedy for a psychological complaint in the economic system, so the administration claims. The banks subscribed $135,000,000, to help carry the cotton crop. The southern banks, however, took less than one million of this money, although the rate was reduced subsequently to five per cent. Now steps are being taken to dissolve the pool. As soon as it was apparent that $135,000,000 would be available for loaning on cotton, the southern banks did not want the money. They loaned their own money. It was not the money that was needed but the confidence and willingness to lend money. The formation of the pool supplied the confidence and the money was loaned.

There is some bitterness expressed by the southern growers over the delay in the formation of the pool, and the consequent loss to them while the price of cotton was so greatly depressed. It is claimed that had the $135,000,000 been more promptly subscribed and been made accessible to the actual grower of cotton, the latter would have been saved from heavy losses and increased mortgages. The grower accuses the middleman and incidentally the banker of profiting at his expense. It is impossible to say to what extent this has happened. The bankers claim that the opening of the cotton exchange was the step which saved the situation and sent cotton from an almost minus quantity to 8 cents a pound, which is enough to cover the cost of growing and selling. As soon as the exchange was opened the market began to recover and these operations coupled with the fact that the foreign demand even in Germany began to make itself felt, relieved the situation so that now money is easier and the general business situation in the south is reported to be much improved.

The gold pool worked out in much the same way; $100,000,000 was subscribed and none of it was used. The existence of the pool restored confidence and credit took place of gold.

The Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency issued to relieve the strain produced by the war has been going back to the Treasury quite rapidly. The total amount issued was $384,485,000. This has been reduced to approximately $100,000,000.

In 154 cities of the central states building permits issued in 1914 amounted to 771,017,852 as against 838,945,302 for the same cities in 1913, a falling off of eight percent.

According to the Federal Reserve board, the indebtedness of the United States to Europe on the first of September in debts maturing within thirty days was approximately $500,000,000. This indebtness has been paid and a balance of trade established over foreign exports which for December was $131,000,000. Now it is reported that England proposes to float part of its war loan in the United States.

The largest mail order house in the United States has just cut a melon amounting to $20,000,000. These accumulated profits, which are not by any means all the profits, were distributed in stock to the stockholders. Representative Stevens of New Hampshire, author of the "fair trade" bill, calls attention to this fact as an argument in favor of standardizing trade articles. It is claimed that many articles sold by mail order houses are not what they are represented to be and that their competition is not fair competition because there are no standards to which their advertising must conform.

Here is a new angle on the ship purchase bill. England, it seems, has suddenly taken an interest, not against the bill, but in favor of it. The reason is interesting. It seems that in case Germany should succeed in blocking by submarines the British Isles, and cutting off, as is threatened, the British supply of food, England would like to have a lot of grain ships carrying the United States flag and United States government owned, to perform the neutral function of carrying food to them. The pro-Germans in Washington who are becoming quite active, do not conceal their pleasure in the Democratic revolt headed by O'Gorman and Clark of Arkansas, against the ship purchase bill. O'Gorman is one of our Gaelics who are not pro-Allies, and the shipping fight has thus been complicated by war sympathies.

Each year the import of opium from India into China is reduced by 5,100 chests.

More Nourishment---

—in a package of Grape-Nuts than in a roast of beef.

All the bone-making, blood-making, muscle-making values of choicest wheat combined with malted barley are afforded in this famous pure food.

Grape-Nuts being partially pre-digested by long baking, gives quickly a wonderful power to "do," in return for the small energy required to digest it. Better and more complete nourishment than Grape-Nuts and cream is difficult to find; and with the price of meat way up there's true economy, too.

Huntington, Ind., Feb. 8.—Mrs. Ray Dillon, aged 35, of near Majenica, who cut her throat with a razor Saturday while mentally unbalanced, told her physician yesterday afternoon that she wants to get well. The shock of the self-inflicted wound and loss of blood cleared her mind and she said that life seems normal to her for the first time since a nervous breakdown five months ago.

Wether the return of reason will be only temporary the doctors could not tell. They regard it as a favorable sign and think it will greatly improve her chances of getting well. After her mind cleared she called her four children, all boys, to her bedside. Calling each one by name she said they again looked as they had before her mind was deranged.

The oldest boy is eight and the youngest only a few months of age.

ILLEGAL SALES STOPPED.

Alleged Liquor Law Violations in Muncie Are Curbed.

Muncie, Ind., Feb. 8.—A canvass of a number of places suspected of being "blind tigers" revealed the fact that many of the proprietors were out of the city.

The places where liquor is said to have been sold illegally and openly for several months are still in operation, however, but it is believed that some of these places are now what they seem—cigar stores or restaurants.

The grand jury, which recently returned 112 indictments, virtually all of which were for alleged violations of the liquor laws, is in temporary adjournment, but will reconvene to continue its investigation February 23.

SHOT BY HIS BROTHER

Syracuse, Ind., Feb. 8.—Truman Long, the 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Long, who reside north and west of Syracuse, is lying in Goshen hospital, the result of a rifle ball wound received while hunting on his father's farm. The victim, in company with his younger brother, Lael, aged 8 years, was engaged in hunting a skunk. One had been shot by the elder of the boys and while he was examining the animal his brother took the rifle and aiming at the dead body of the skunk, said: "I'm going to shoot a skunk, too." He pulled the trigger, the bullet entering the thigh of the older boy.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Adv.

WANTED TO GO TO CHICAGO.

Kokomo, Ind., Feb. 8.—The desire of Glade Outland, 24, living in the northern part of this county, to go to Chicago when he did not have enough money is blamed for his arrest, charged with robbing the Converse station of the C. & O. railroad. It is alleged that Outland entered the station a month ago while the agent was outside and got a round-trip ticket to Chicago.

THE FINISHING TOUCHES

Stephens meetings which will open February 14, is to be decorated on Tuesday evening, and the decorations are to be in the national colors, with flags and bunting the materials for decorative purposes.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

Recognized Advantages.

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most medicines in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough, but loosens and relieves it. It aids expectoration and opens the secretions, which enables the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

An explosion of a reel of films caused a panic about 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the Hippodrome motion picture theatre at 112 West Main street, but fortunately no one was injured. Edward Erickson, the operator, says that a small flame used in patching films ignited the film he was handling. Soon the film was a mass of flames which shot out from the operator's booth into the theatre. Flames bursting from the front window of the booth also caught fire to a large awning. The fire department had little trouble in extinguishing the blaze, the damage being confined to the booth with its contents and to the awning. The theatre is owned by O. E. Wobrock.

They rasp and strain your throat, tear at your chest and lungs, congest the blood in your neck and head, almost strangle you, leave you weak and fairly exhausted. Often they are a symptom of such grave diseases as bronchitis, pleurisy, pneumonia—even tuberculosis.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND spreads a healing, soothing coating as it glides down the raw inflamed throat. It loosens the cough, brings the phlegm up easily. Takes away that tight feeling across the chest, and eases stuffy, wheezy breathing and hoarseness.

A dealer of Toledo, Ohio, (name furnished) who has sold FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR for years, writes: "One of my customers came into store to use long distance telephone. He was coughing so violently that he could not talk. I sat him down and gave him a bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR, and in 10 minutes he had recovered. He had been unable to work for three months, due to this cough. He says FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR relieved him entirely of this trouble."

S. MARTIN, Bassett, Nebr., writes: "I had a severe cough and cold and was almost past going. I got a bottle of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR and used it frequently, when having violent coughing spells, and am glad to say it cured my cough entirely and my cold soon disappeared."

KEPT PET BULLDOG IN BOMB-PROOF CELLAR

San Francisco, Feb. 5.—So worried was Mrs. E. J. Dugan, wife of the famous jockey, that her pet bulldog "Honey Boy," would be killed by bombs in Warsaw, where she and her husband were enveloped by the Russo-German siege operations, that she had a special bombproof cellar constructed for him. "Honey Boy" is valued at $1,000.

E. J. Dugan, Mrs. Dugan and "Honey Boy."

Mr. and Mrs. Dugan and their pug-nosed companion have just returned here from the war zone, via the Orient.

"I was worried nearly to death over 'Honey Boy,'" said the wife of the jockey whose earnings were over $50,000 a year. "We kept him locked up in that bombproof cellar nearly all the time, and I often stayed down there with him just to keep him company."

"Zeppelins were constantly hovering over the city," said Mrs. Dugan, describing their experiences during the seige. "One of the bombs struck Duke Lazareff's stables and killed most of his horses. During the German attack the wounded were brought into the city by hundreds—almost as fast as they went out to the fighting line."

Colds and Croup in Children.

Many people rely upon Chamberlain's Cough Remedy implicitly in cases of colds and croup, and it never disappoints them. Mrs. E. H. Thomas, Logansport, Ind., writes: "I have found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be the best medicine for colds and croup I have ever used, and never tire of recommending it to my neighbors and friends. I have always given it to my children when suffering from croup, and it has never failed to give them prompt relief." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

RUSSIA NEEDS COTTON.

Will Absorb Large Quantities When Shipping Improves.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Russia will absorb large quantities of American cotton as soon as there are facilities for shipping it from the south to that country, American Consul General Snodgrass, at Moscow, reports. Russian dealers have been endeavoring, with poor results, to obtain a cotton supply from England, but no goods are accepted via Archangel, and railroad lines from Sweden to Russia are badly congested. The consul says the Russian crop for 1914-1915 amounts to 1,320,000 bales. Practically no American cotton is now going forward to Russia, he says.

No more cotton should be shipped to Goteborg, Sweden, at present, according to Commercial Attache Thompson, at Rotterdam, because of congestion at that port. He states there is no difficulty in shipping through Rotterdam to Germany.

SEEK LICENSE REVOCATIONS.

South Bend Ministers Are Active Against Saloonkeepers.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 8.—A request of Fred W. Keller, mayor, to revoke thirty-five or forty more saloon licenses in this city, as a result of disclosures brought out in recent investigations, has been made by the South Bend Ministerial association and the Law and Order league. The names of the saloonkeepers have been turned over to the mayor, and some action will be taken on the matter within the next few days. Charges of being unfit morally to conduct such establishments and failure to obey law have been placed against the saloon men.

The names of the accused dealers have not been made public, but it is known that the list contains the owners of many of the principal liquor establishments of the city.

48-HOUR LIMIT FOR HOLDING OF CATTLE

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Union stock yards, which have been under partial quarantine since January 29 because of a threatened outbreak of foot and mouth disease, were reopened today for the interstate shipment of cattle. No cattle, however, may be held for more than forty-eight hours. Government inspectors have been authorized to slaughter cattle held in violation of this order. Squads of men are still applying disinfectants to the miles of pens and alleys in the yards. It was said that the work of disinfecting the entire plant would require at least a week.

Orders have been piling up so rapidly since the inspection of the yards that the next three weeks, it was said, will be the busiest in the history of the packing houses.

GREEK CRAFT FLYING STARS AND STRIPES

New York, Feb. 8.—Curtailment of the European trade with South America because of war and a shortage of steamships has brought about a demand for flying vessels of American registry and every ship, bark and schooner flying the American flag is being eagerly sought to carry cargoes between New York and Brazil and the Argentine.

For the first time in twenty years schooners and ships engaged in the coal and lumber trade in the coastwise traffic have been chartered as carriers in the South American trade. More than a dozen of these vessels are now loading at local piers with cargo for South America.

She was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Adv.

It is quite a surprise, having seen and laughed at Coddles, the patient, pursuing Coddles, in "A Pair of Sixes," whose unreciprocated affection for the masquerading butler in this new and joyous farce is one of the striking farcical features, to find that in real life she is a very charming young lady and the exact antithesis of her stage character.

During the long run of "A Pair of Sixes" at the Longacre Theatre, New York it aroused general comment that while "Coddles" in her "working hours" during the time she was on the stage and most before the eyes of the public was a slavey and one of the most woe-begone creatures of the modern stage, when she passed out of the stage door and took up her real life apparently had given more care to her costuming than any other woman player on Broadway.

It is told that the quaint drawing of the character has been such that the player naturally feels that she must take more than the usual feminine care of her appearance when she is off the boards to offset the painfully unattractive appearance of "Coddles."

As soon as the interviewer settles down for a talk with Coddles it is discovered she has a grievance. She voices it immediately. The grievance is a very human one, and she is commiserated for it at once for it might affect anyone and particularly an actress to whom the remembrance of the public is a cherished thing. It is that notwithstanding all the study she has given in years gone by, and all the roles in which she has been well received by the public for years that she has been featured since her debut on Broadway in "A Pair of Sixes," as having but one claim on the public mind, and that is her ability to hit the back of her head on the unfeeling boards of the stage, upper left center and the audience's bump of humor at one and the same time.

She goes to a nearby receptacle and extracts a clipping from her home paper, one of the New York correspondent's letters which is headlined "Stage Flop Makes an Actress," and ignoring her obvious claims to praise on account of the clever piece of character work which she has given, harps throughout the article on the one note of that wonderful fall, which she describes as a stage trick, quite popular in the days when, if an actor could not gain the applause of the public in any other way, he could always take a tumble and so make a ten strike.

This clipping has been followed by expostulatory letters from her family and friends, who have been shocked at the idea of her turning handsprings or something of the sort, which is the character you would assign to her after reading this and a lot of other criticism, so-called.

Edward Peple, the playwright, stated that "Coddles" had made more of the part than he had put into it, a not uncommon surprise to many playwrights, one would judge, but when you come to talk it over you discover that her personal translation of it has been more along the physical than the psychological lines. For in answer to the question as to whether she thinks, in these enlightened days, there are women even in "Coddles'" class who worship so unreservedly and with such scant returns, "Coddles" looks slightly perplexed, as if she had not given that part of the subject much thought, and then digs from the inner recesses of her mind a single instance of a middle-aged woman who was so in love with a man that she hounded him with presents and attentions. The man was an actor and of course cannot be judged by ordinary standards, being so far above the commonplace man in attractions; so poor "Coddles" is still left unexplained, psychologically.

But from the other angle, "Coddles" talks unreservedly. Her turn for dialects, if not the absolute reason for her success in character work, has helped immeasurably. To the Canadian home came all sorts and kinds of "help," immigrants from Yorkshire, Lancashire, Scotch and Irish girls newly landed and preserving intact all the peculiarities of their native tongue. The family circle also numbered some friends from the old country whose brogue was captivating enough to emulate.

"Coddles" and her sister soon became adept in imitations, and though the Cockney talk of "Coddles" would seem to have reached the top note of perfection, she says that her Irish brogue is her particular pride, while her sister could always beat her far and away when they came to discourse in Scotch.

"I have always associated the tightly coiled hair, the wasp-like waist, the narrow shoulders with a woman of the 'Coddles' type whom we had work for us," she explains in answer to the interrogation concerning make-up and costumes, "and determined that if I ever had an opportunity to duplicate her Sunday best I would do so. I have studied rigidly the dress of every character I had to represent, because I believe in the slightest details of the clothes the temperment is shown just as distinctly as in the gestures, intonations and silence."

It is a pity that some of the young American actresses could not take a leaf out of "Coddles'" book and achieve a real success by subordinating their physical attractions for a few years to the arduous work demanded by character parts which is, according to authorities, the only way of obtaining something besides a Paquin popularity.

ANGRY WOMEN STORM GATES OF FACTORIES

Roosevelt, N. J., Feb. 8.—A crowd of angry women stormed the gates of the Liebeg, Williams & Clark fertilizer plants here today where nineteen strikers were shot by deputies January 19, and administered a thorough beating to Elmer Osborne, chief engineer at the Liebeg works, and Frank Davis, a clerk at the Williams & Clark plant. Both men were rescued by special policemen, sworn in yesterday.

The trouble started when some of the men attempted to go to work for $1.60 a day. This was the wage they received at the time of the strike, the previous wage having been $2 a day. The women jeered and hooted the men going to work this morning, and when Osborne and Davis appeared attacked them. One man among the crowd of women was arrested.

The companies operating the plants issued a notice yesterday to the effect that unless the men returned to work today they would be discharged. Strike leaders said none of the strikers were among the men who went to work today.

TWO MORE MAY HAVE BEEN BURIED ALIVE

Yonkers, N. Y., Feb. 8.—To the story that eight feeble inmates of the German Odd Fellows' home here had been put to death because they were aged and required much attention, was added today the suggestion that two other inmates might have been buried alive while still under the influence of an anesthetic. It was believed at least two of the bodies would be exhumed.

The coroner today began an investigation of this suggestion. There was little tangible for him to work on except reports founded on the fears of the present inmates, with whom he held a long talk yesterday. The New York undertakers who took charge of the bodies were to be questioned as to what steps they had taken to make sure that life was extinct before burial.

DIES AS RESULT OF INJURIES

Dr. Noah Zehr, of this city, received word Sunday evening that his brother, Amos Zehr, had died in San Francisco following a street car accident in which he was seriously injured. The deceased was born in Berne and is survived by his widow and one son, Roland. Funeral services and burial will take place in San Francisco.

Mrs. Charles Geddis was operated on at the Lutheran hospital Saturday for appendicitis. She is getting along nicely.

London, Feb. 8.—(12 noon.)—The news of the arrival at Liverpool, under the American flag of the Cunard line steamer, Lusitania, is given much space in the English papers today. The information was received too late to permit of much editorial comment as yet, but enough has been printed to show that the incident is regarded as one of great importance. It is not generally expected, however, that the British government will take further action unless Washington requests an explanation.

In the realm of military interest all eyes today are turned toward the eastern battle front. Here the tremendous efforts of both sides have not as yet produced any results worthy to be called decisive. The Russian forces, which have been giving ground before the fierce attacks of the reinforcements of the Austro-German army in the Carpathian passes, apparently have checked the onward rush of the defenders of Hungary, but in Poland, in front of Warsaw, the opponents appear still to be hammering each other's lines with a fierceness which recalls today the first German invasion of Poland.

In spite of the desperate nature of the fighting in front of Warsaw, it is generally believed in England that the most critical action is developing in the Carpathians, where the reported Russian reverse will compromise the new campaign opening against Hungary.

Except for several minor attacks of the Germans on Nieuport, the western line of battle evidently has enjoyed a quiet week end. Air and sea operations also have been suspended during the past few days, London not even being thrilled by the usual Sunday rumors that Zeppelins were on their way to the British capital. Also there has been complete absence of any naval news.

ORDERS FROM ADMIRALTY.

British Directed Use of Stars and Stripes by Lusitania.

London, Feb. 8.—(3:00 a. m.)—It was upon orders of the British admiralty that the Cunard steamship Lusitania raised the American flag while crossing the Irish sea, according to a dispatch from Liverpool to the Daily Chronicle.

"When the Lusitania was off the coast of Ireland on Saturday morning," says the dispatch, a wireless message was received from the admiralty ordering the captain to hoist the American flag and sail under it to Liverpool. This was done."

The captain of the Lusitania was quoted as saying on his arrival at Liverpool that he had a right to fly the American flag, as there were neutral passengers and a neutral cargo on board, but made no reference to any orders.

While no official confirmation of the Liverpool report was given out today the foreign office gave out a statement last night, in which the use of a neutral flag was justified.

TRAIN BANDITS ROB MEN; WOMEN ESCAPE

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 8.—The Palm Beach limited train of the Florida East Coast railroad, bound from Jacksonville to Miami, was boarded by four masked men at Stuart, Fla., early last night and male passengers on the observation platform robbed of money and jewelry.

No attempt was made to molest women passengers. They were forced, however, to enter the car. After completing their search of the men, the robbers made their way through the car where they found that a brakeman had locked the front door. Revolvers were turned on the brakeman and he was ordered to pull the bell cord to stop the train. When it slowed down the bandits jumped to the ground and escaped. It was not known how much money and jewelry the robbers obtained, but it was not believed the amount was large. Posses are searching for the men.

SIX-CENT BREAD IS ALMOST CERTAINTY

With little hope of any great reduction in wheat the price of bread will doubtless have to be increased to six cents a loaf, in the opinion of George M. Haffner, who returned Saturday afternoon from Washington, D. C., where he called upon the chamber of commerce as national councilor representing the National Association of Master Bakers, and also as a delegate from the Fort Wayne Commercial club. Theodore Thieme, national councilor for the Commercial club, who also attended the meeting, went on to New York city, where he will spend a few days before returning to this city.

Mr. Haffner says that the bakers have five delegates at Washington. A resolution asking congress to curb, if possible, the rising price of wheat and flour was presented, but was evidently killed, inasmuch as the embargo would not prevent the advance of wheat for the reason that foreign representatives can buy futures from the board of trade. This does not stop the shortage, over which the bakers have absolutely no control. In the opinion of Mr. Haffner six-cent bread is inevitable.

RUSH TO RUM JOINT OVER MEXICAN LINE

Naco, Arizona, Feb. 8.—One saloon opened for business in Naco, Sonora, yesterday within the toss of a bottle from the site of the principal bar room here which was closed when Arizona went dry on New Year's day.

All the main highways from near-by Arizona towns were heavily traveled yesterday and the Mexicans were far outnumbered in their own town by visiting Americans.

VETERAN HIKER SETS WALKING RECORD AT 60

William Greer Harrison at Head of the Oldest Athletic Club.

San Francisco, Feb. 8.—The athletic career of William Greer Harrison, seventy-nine-year-old amateur sportsman, may be said to cover three score years and ten for the veteran athlete has been interested in sports ever since he was six years old.

"As a boy I was president of an athletic club," said Harrison. And as a man it was as president of an athletic club that Harrison gained the most fame. His career as president of the Olympic club of this city, the oldest athletic club in the world, is one of which any sportsman might be proud.

Wm. Greer Harrison

For twenty years William Greer Harrison headed the Olympic club and it was due to his efforts that the institution took its place at the head of athletic organizations. He financed a water company for the sole purpose of assuring the club a permanent supply of salt water for its plunge.

Although Harrison grew up to be a capable boxer, fencer and wrestler, he achieved greatest fame as a walker. And the ability of walking is still with him. On New Year's day, 1915, the veteran hiked eight miles across the city with the Olympic club on its annual outing to the beach and took a plunge in the icy surf along with all the other club members. On his sixtieth birthday Harrison walked sixty-one miles in fifteen hours, thereby establishing a walking record.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Wheat prices took an upward turn today, nfluenced to some extent by Liverpool dispatches telling of fear as to a shortage of supplies in Great Britain and France. After opening ⅝c off to ¾c up, quotations scored a material all around advance.

The close was unsettled at ⅛c to ⅜c net lower.

Corn reflected the action of wheat. Commission houses did most of the buying, pit speculators the bulk of the selling. The opening, which varied from a shade decline to ½c gain, was followed by a moderate general advance.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Feb. 8.—The foreign situation again was the cause of some irregularity in today's early stock market, leading shares showing variable changes. The feature was Bethlehem Steel, which rose 2 points to a new high record. Railroad issues inclined to a lower level, but soon recovered. Southern Pacific moving up a point. Interest attached to the movement of Canadian Pacific, which rose over a point in London in anticipation of the maintenance of the regular dividend at today's meeting of the directors. By the end of the half hour the entire list was firm under lead of Reading and United States Steel.

Short selling unsettled the list soon after the early rise but stocks were freely taken on the decline. Canadian Pacific sold higher than before and Bethlehem Steel increased its gain to 3 points. Other leaders reflected bearish aggression, however, Union Pacific and Reading unevenly. Various specials were put forward for substantial gains. Some equipment shares were heavy American Locomotive being at its new minimum of 33. Seaboard Air Line also fell 2¼ to its fixed price of 36. Bonds were firm, some minor issues gaining over 2 points.

At the regular meeting held Sunday afternoon the members of the Emmaus Lutheran congregation passed a resolution to petition the representatives and the senators of the state to use their influence in behalf of and vote for the passage of the bill now before congress forbidding all and every export of war material to beligerent countries.

A letter was drawn up by members which will be sent to Congressman Cyrus Cline, which reads as follows:

Dear Sir: In their regular meeting, held Feb. 7, the Emmaus Lutheran congregation of Fort Wayne, including about 500 voting citizens, have adopted the following resolutions, which they respectfully submit to your consideration:

Whereas, the dreadful war between European nations causes untold suffering and unlimited loss, not only to beligerent, but to neutral countries of the world.

Whereas, furthermore, it is the desire of every fair-minded citizen of our country that peace be established and the war ended as soon as possible.

Whereas, furthermore, the highest official of the United States, the president, has requested all God-fearing citizens of our country to pray for peace between the waring nations.

Whereas, furthermore, this congregation has complied with this request of the president of the United States and every Sunday does pray unto God for peace.

Whereas, finally, the practice of sending arms, amunition and war materials to beligerent countries is directly contrary to the spirit which prompted our government to request our citizens to pray for peace.

Be it therefore resolved, that we protest against all and every export of arms, amunition and war materials to beligerent countries.

Furthermore, that we as Americans, respectfully call your attention to house resolution H. J., 337.

Furthermore, that we ask you to work actively and to vote so as to make this bill a law during this session of congress.

CRUEL DRIVER GETS LENIENT TREATMENT

Louis Heidenbrink pleaded guilty in the city court Monday morning, to a charge of cruelty to animals and declined to offer any defense until Acting Prosecutor Frank M. Hogan and Judge Kerr insisted that he take the stand and answer some questions. Night Patrolman Coulter testified that on the night of January 30, during a furious snowstorm, Heidenbrink's team had stood for seven hours on the street uncovered and facing the blizzard. On two previous occasions shortly before Heidenbrink had left them unblanketed, once for five hours and another time for almost four. He was enjoying the warmth of a saloon while his helpless beasts were buffeted by the wintry blasts. He was let off with great leniency for the court assessed a fine of but $1 and costs.

Is Charged With Burglary.

Merle Stritmatter had some difficulty entering a satisfactory plea to a charge of burglary for having broken into the poolroom and sigar store operated by James Selby in the Randall hotel building and his case was continued until Tuesday morning with his bond fixed at $1,000. He had been employed at the place, was discharged February 1 and early on the morning of February 3 forcibly entered the place through the basement of the hotel, removing the covering of a window to do so. Selby missed some cigars, cigarettes and candy. Stritmatter says he went into the place to sleep, but left at once because noise in the hotel lobby adjoining prevented peaceable slumber. He strenuously denies taking anything and none of the stolen property has been found. He is a brother of Pearl Stritmatter, who has repeatedly been arrested for stealing.

Other City Court Cases.

The charge of assault and battery against Albert Hoover, an 18-year-old lad who is accused of attempting shocking crimes upon Louisa Pontello and other little Italian girls, was continued until Tuesday morning and his bond was fixed at $1,000. The police expect to make other arrests in this case. Hoover has been fully identified by several of the little girls.

Jim McGuire, a one-legged shoestring peddler, was fined $5 and costs on a drunk charge. He had been out of jail but a day when he was arrested.

Martin Reagan, another peddler who got drunk, was fined $5 and costs and went over.

Joe Boski, a Pole, was drunk on borrowed money and made trouble when Officer Patte arrested him. He drew $1 and costs.

Mick Frank, who had been lodging for a week in the "bum room" at police headquarters, went there drunk Saturday night and started a row. He beat himself up with his own fists and had a face to show for it. He went over for eleven days.

George Kane, who says he is employed as a window trimmer for a down town store would not get out of a restaurant, where he has made a practice of loafing after the saloons close at midnight, and was sent in and charged with loitering by Officer Coulter. His case was continued a week and he was allowed to go.
